Simpler process for certification

Seminar focuses on key NCAA topics

The emphasis is on simplification as the legislative deadline approaches for the proposed NCAA athletics certification program.

That was the message from NCAA officials who discussed the program during an NCAA media seminar June 16 in Washington, D.C.

Although the general response from the 35 institutions participating in a pilot certification program was favorable, a recurring concern was that the process was too complicated and time-consuming.

"The pilot program was highly complicated—for a reason," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said.

John H. Leavens, assistant executive director for compliance services, said the complexity was necessary for the pilot program to generate adequate data. The final plan will be quite different from what was experienced by the pilot-program participants, he said.

At the moment, the most fundamental change involves the program's scope. The final plan probably will call for the scope to cover four areas: academic integrity, fiscal integrity, governance and equity (including matters involving gender, race and the overall experience of the athlete). The pilot program called for an examination of seven areas.

Also, Leavens said the list of 200 questions specified in the pilot program will be reduced substantially, probably to 40 or 45. He also said attempts are being made to rely on existing documentation rather than on generating new reports.

"I hope it will end up being a very simple process," Schultz said.

Other points made on the subject of athletics certification:

Bradley will join task force

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey, has been appointed as a consultant to the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force.

Bradley is the second member of Congress named to the group. Rep. Tom Coleman, R-Missouri, is the other.

Bradley

The Gender-Equity Task Force was formed in April to examine possible disparities in the treatment of men and women in intercollegiate athletics. The first meeting of the task force will be July 9 in Dallas.

Bradley joined the Senate in 1979 and was reelected to his third term in 1990.

Catastrophic plan changes

Athletics directors soon will receive materials describing changes in the catastrophic-injury insurance coverage provided to all member institutions by the NCAA, which has selected a new insurance provider for the program.

The insurance—which provides for benefits to those who sustain injuries in competition, practice or related travel resulting in irrecoverable loss of physical or mental capacity—is underwritten by North American Specialty

Cardinal rules over NCAA championships

SPECIAL TO THE NCAA NEWS

Color the 1991-92 NCAA championships year Cardinal.

In that time, Stanford University won five team championships. While no official records are kept regarding the number of team championships in a year for one school, it is believed to have matched the mark set by the University of California, Los Angeles, in 1981-82.

"There is no question that it has been a terrific year," Stanford associate athletics director Tom Beckett said. "The coaches, student-athletes and all those who support Stanford athletics can be proud. We also won 29 individual titles, which broke our school mark 16 championships.

"Swimming led the way with nine men's individual championships and 12 women's. Stanford also won seven Pacific-10 Conference championships.

"We're real proud of the broad-based programs that Stanford has supplied to our students," Beckett said. "The support of our alumni and the academic community is wonderful. To put together a year like this is something that everyone rallies behind. It has been one special year."

It was a special year for all of California, as Stanford led a Golden State gold rush of 18 team titles.

Briefly in the News

Swimmer makes good company

When Joe Zimsen, a swimmer at Grinnell College, agreed to travel with the Pioneers baseball team on a training trip during spring break, little did he know he would use his talents to help save the life of one of the players.

Zimsen

While the team was in Pensacola, Florida, freshman Adam White was enjoying a swim in the Gulf of Mexico. Because his back was turned from the shore, he failed to realize the distance the current was carrying him from safety. When he realized his plight, he attempted to get back to shore but failed.

Another team member, searching for a lifeguard, stopped by Zimsen's hotel room to tell him of the problem. Unable to locate a flotation device, Zimsen hurried to the sea, began to swim out through eight-foot waves and helped bring White back to shore.

For his efforts, Zimsen was honored by Grinnell President Pamela A. Ferguson at an honors luncheon.

Position endowed

Yale University has received a $1.25 million grant from the Milligan Foundation of Westport, Connecticut, to endow the institution's head men's lacrosse coaching position. The position will be called the Milligan Foundation Coach of Yale Men's Lacrosse.

The grant was made in honor of the 20th reunion of Robert B. Milligan Jr., a member of the Yale class of 1972 and treasurer of the Milligan Foundation, and as a contribution to the Yale Campaign, the university's effort to raise $1.5 billion for campus renovations, endowments and current-use funds over the next five years.

Michael Waldvogel, who has guided the Eli lacrosse program since 1980, will be the first to hold the position.

All-around athletes

Utah State University gymnast Barb Zahl

and football player Steve Neeleman were named the school's woman and man of the year recently.

The significance of the awards is that they are open to all students, not just athletes. Utah State also honored Zahl as the top female student-athlete of the year, making her the first to win both awards for women since 1972-73.

Neeleman, who maintained a 3.900 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in pre-medicine liberal arts and sciences, was not expecting the honor.

"I was a little surprised, but was also really pleased," Neeleman said. "I was surprised because there were a lot of other worthy candidates who could have won the award."

Program nets degrees

Thanks to Arkansas State University's new degree completion program for former student-athletes, eight former players now have college degrees.

Athletics director Charley Thornton implemented the program during the 1990-91 academic year.

"It's awfully tough nowadays for a student-athlete to finish degree requirements in four years," he said. "This program allows a special opportunity for some of those who need that extra year."

The program expects to award a ninth former student-athlete with a degree in August. Eight others currently are enrolled at the institution.

'Golden Girl' visits

Betty White, who played the absent-minded Rose Nyland on the NBC sitcom "The Golden Girls," visited St. Olaf College May 3-4 and helped the women's softball team sing its fight song, "Um! Yah Yah!"

White's sunshine spread onto the diamond, where the Oles wrapped up the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title a day after White's visit and finished the season with a 28-6-1 record.

White's character on the show hailed from fictional St. Olaf, Minnesota, but this was her first real visit to the state. She was the guest at a St. Olaf choir concert and was made an honorary member of the St. Olaf chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, the national theater scholastic honor society. White also spoke to a St. Olaf theater class.

Milestones

Two coaches on the King's College (Pennsylvania) campus reached milestones during the 1991-92 academic year.

Men's basketball coach Ken Atkins completed his ninth season by notching his 150th victory. He guided the Monarchs to a 20-8 record and a berth in the Division III Men's Basketball Championship. Meanwhile, men's tennis coach Bill Eydler earned his 200th career victory while guiding his team to a 16-5 record and the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference North title for the second straight year.

Elsewhere: Stevens Institute of Technology men's tennis coach Rich Morell recently concluded his 11th straight winning season, going 7-3. His Ducks claimed their 13th Independent Athletic Conference championship. Morell has compiled a record of 94-52-2 at Stevens Tech.

Fact file

A total of 233 persons have served on the NCAA Executive Committee in its 87 years of existence. Membership on the committee has ranged from five to 14, always including the NCAA officers at the time. Of the 233, a total of 129 have represented current Division I-A members. Fifty have been from current Division III members, 34 from Division I-AA, 16 from Division II and eight from Division I-AAA members. The division numbers exceed the total because of several instances of individuals moving from one member to another.

Membership's July 1 legislative deadline approaches

Member institutions and conferences are reminded that legislative proposals for the Association's 1993 Convention must be submitted to the national office by Wednesday, July 1.

Important information to keep in mind in order to file amendments by the deadline:

■ Eight sponsors are required for proposals from the membership.

■ Each proposal must be signed by the chief executive officer of every sponsor or by the CEO's designee. CEOs must notify the Association's national office in writing if, and to whom, they delegate this responsibility.

■ Proposals from voting member conferences must be signed by the league's chief elected or executive officer on behalf of at least eight members who wish to sponsor the proposal. Also, as a result of the adoption of 1992 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 112, those proposals also must be signed by the chair of the conference's official presidential administrative group or by at least two CEOs of the conference's member institutions if the conference has no such group.

■ Each proposal must be accompanied by a statement of rationale not to exceed 200 words, and the name of the sponsors' primary contact person must be included.

■ Proposed amendments that are in proper form (e.g., with the necessary signatures) will be accepted by facsimile machine. Those filing proposals in this manner should do so through the legislative services department (fax number 913/339-0032) no later than 5 p.m. Central time July 1.

Between July 1 and July 15, Association staff members and the NCAA Legislative Review Committee will develop final language on proposed amendments. Proposals will be published and distributed to the membership by August 1.

Any time between July 1 and September 1, sponsors may submit modifications that may alter in any germane way their initial submissions.

From September 1 through October 15, "traditional" amendments-to-amendments (i.e., those that may not increase the modification of a proposal) may be submitted.

Amendments-to-amendments require eight sponsors. October 15 also is the deadline for the membership to submit resolutions. Resolutions also must be sponsored by at least eight member institutions.

August 15 is the deadline for legislative proposals submitted by the NCAA Presidents Commission and the NCAA Council.

Also under the calendar, the Council (by two-thirds vote) may submit amendments-to-amendments and resolutions up to the Convention itself. Such submissions must be distributed to the Convention delegates at the business sessions.

Questions regarding any aspect of the legislative calendar should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, NCAA assistant executive director for legislative services, or Daniel T. Dutcher, director of legislative services, at the national office.

Important legislative-calendar dates

When	What
July 1	Membership filing deadline (5 p.m. Central time).
August 1	Proposals distributed to membership.
August 15	Filing deadline for proposals from the NCAA Presidents Commission and the NCAA Council.
September 1	Filing deadline for any germane modifications by original sponsors.
October 15	Filing deadline for "traditional" amendments-to-amendments and resolutions.

Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than July 15, 1992.

Men's and Women's Swimming Committee: Replacement for Peter Daland, University of Southern California, retiring. Appointee must be a Division I representative of men's swimming from District 8.

Betty Ford program leaves a lasting impression

The three-day NCAA/Betty Ford Clinic Alcoholism and Drug Addiction and Awareness Program has opened the eyes of many athletics administrators and others to the magnitude of alcohol and drug abuse.

They have received an up-close-and-personal look at how one of the nation's most renowned treatment centers helps chemically dependent patients recover from their addictions.

The program was begun in late 1990 and is underwritten by Capital Cities/ABC, Inc., in conjunction with the NCAA.

The program is designed to offer participants a comprehensive combination of education and participation in the patient experience. Participants attend meals, lectures, group sessions, exercise and meditation with the patients. In the process, they gain some perspective in understanding chemical dependency.

The Betty Ford Clinic staff conducts structured learning sessions on various aspects of the center's treatment program, including new patient orientation, outpatient after-care services, second- and third-step groups, spirituality, addictive disease, intervention, admission/nursing, and treatment planning.

While some of the participants said it is difficult to incorporate the personal experience of attending the program into viable campus awareness programs, the experience was one they will not soon forget.

"The experience was one of the highlights of my professional career in terms of it being a tremendously powerful emotional experience," University of Kansas athletics director Robert E. Frederick said. "It heightened our awareness of the problem. It's difficult (to implement campus programs) because what you learn about is how they treat the disease there. It made me much more aware of the extent of the problem."

Program recommended

Kathy Clark, assistant athletics director for programs at the University of Idaho and chair of an NCAA substance-abuse subcommittee, recommends the program for other athletics administrators. She said it is important to implement similar efforts on a local level, not only for administrators, but students as well.

"If we could just connect the national experience to a local level..." Clark said. "You can spread the sensitivity, but (the program) is a personal and professional experience. It changes your outlook. One of the frustrations is to transfer it into usable action and usable programs."

Reaching student-athletes is a specific concern for Budd Ferrante, psychologist for athletics at Ohio State University. He said that student-athletes were found in recent studies to be an at-risk group for alcohol and drug abuse. This fall, Ferrante said he hopes to have in place a program in which former student-athletes at Ohio State who are recovering from chemical dependency speak with current Buckeye student-athletes to offer support and education.

Ferrante said he supports institutions that are hiring sports psychologists who can assist student-athletes in dealing with the influences and pressures that Ferrante

Schultz (standing, second from left) was one of several athletics administrators who attended the NCAA/Betty Ford Clinic Alcoholism and Drug Addiction and Awareness Program. said are unique to them.

"Recent research has absolutely shown that collegiate student-athletes are now considered an at-risk group," Ferrante said. "Student-athletes experience significantly elevated stress; not only physical stress, but emotional stress and academic stress. And those are very unique pressures and stresses. The awareness of those facts is perhaps only now beginning to open some eyes across the nation."

Steve Solomon, senior vice-president for sports planning and administration at ABC Sports, attended the program in early May, along with NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz. Solomon said the program made an impact on him.

"Overwhelming, fascinating," Solomon said. "The experience is one I will never forget. I learned more about the problems and make-up of alcoholism and drug-dependent personalities than imaginable. The process and the support that these patients receive is very special."

Schultz said he hopes that athletics directors and university officials will participate in the program.

"We need to find high-level people out there, impact people on college campuses who are ready to help with developing on-campus programs," Schultz said. "My hope is that we can heighten the awareness of the decision-makers, that key people from each school can go out there and come back to develop awareness at their respective campuses."

'Reliability' described Bates

By David D. Smale

SPECIAL TO THE NCAA NEWS

Leo "The Lip" was wrong.

The late Leo Durocher, former major league baseball player and manager, was famous for defending his cranky disposition by saying, "Nice guys finish last."

Well, Leo didn't meet Stan Bates.

Bates spent nearly 50 years in athletics—as a player, coach and administrator—disproving Durocher's theory. A 10-time letter-winner in football, basketball and track at the University of Puget Sound (then the College of Puget Sound) in the early 1930s, he spent 18 successful years as a high-school coach before moving to Washington State University, where he served as director of admissions for one year and director of athletics for 17. He was named commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference in 1971, and he remained there until his retirement in 1980.

Two themes

Through it all, two themes blended consistently—achievement and integrity.

"Stan has the qualities of a consummate gentleman and a professional," said Joseph L. Kearney, the man who succeeded Bates as WAC commissioner and has known his predecessor since Bates was principal and coach at Snohomish (Washington) High School in 1947. "He has the highest integrity. If he gave you his word, you could take it to the bank. His handshake was as good as a contract."

Bates' trademark was being able to get things done while making parties on both sides of the issue feel good about it. John Reid, executive director of the Thrifty Car Rental Holiday Bowl, remembers when the Fiesta Bowl was created while Bates was commissioner of the WAC. The Fiesta Bowl had ties to the WAC because the University of Arizona and Arizona State University were members of the conference.

When the two schools later made the decision to switch to the Pacific-10 Conference, the Fiesta Bowl broke ties with the WAC. A potentially volatile situation was resolved, however, because Bates was able to appease both sides. "Stan was able to bypass the ill will and stop the acrimony," Reid said. "He has such a quietly effective way of dealing with people. He kept the negotiations on a high plane."

"But he didn't sit back and cry over spilled milk. He convinced San Diego that it should go for a bowl of its own. The Holiday Bowl was instituted, and it would not have happened without Stan's work."

The development of the Holiday Bowl is just one notch on Bates' belt. He was one of the founders of the National Association of Collegiate Director of Athletics, and he served on the NCAA Executive Committee from 1970 through 1977. He also served on numerous other NCAA committees.

'Achievement' a good word

Thomas C. Hansen, commissioner of the Pacific-10, said, "Achievement is a good word for Stan. He built an athletics program at Washington

AFCA's McClendon will retire in 1994

Charlie McClendon, who spent 30 years as a football coach at the University of Kentucky, Vanderbilt University and Louisiana State University, will retire in February 1994 as executive director of the American Football Coaches Association.

McClendon

McClendon, 68, rounding out his 11th year as executive director of the 6,000-member association, officially informed the AFCA Board of Trustees of his plans at the board's summer meeting recently in Dallas.

"Charlie Mac has had the best interests of our profession close to his heart since the first day he stepped on the field as a coach," said association president John Cooper, head football coach at Ohio State University. "He's been loyal to our game and profession for a long time."

As executive director, McClendon's greatest legacy was in forming the American Football Coaches Retirement Trust, a retirement plan designed especially for coaches, the first of its type in the association's 70-year history.

McClendon also campaigned to give assistant coaches more job security by having their contracts run from July to July, a practice now followed by more than 60 percent of NCAA Division I schools.

He was instrumental in 1986 in establishing a $500,000 scholarship program linked to the association's NCAA Division I-A coaches' poll that annually provides a $50,000 academic scholarship to the school ranked No. 1 in the final USA Today/CNN Top 25 Coaches' Poll.

McClendon began coaching football at Kentucky in 1950 as an assistant under Paul "Bear" Bryant after playing two years for the Wildcats after his transfer from Magnolia Junior College in Arkansas. After two seasons at Kentucky, he coached a year at Vanderbilt before signing on at Louisiana State, where he stayed 27 years, the first nine as an assistant under Gaynell Tinsley and Paul Dietzel.

As Louisiana State head coach, McClendon achieved a 137-59-7 record for a .692 winning percentage over 18 years that included trips by the Tigers to 13 bowl games.

Kick foul language out of the games

By Thomas K. Hearn Jr.
PRESIDENT, WAKE FOREST UNIVERSITY

The Division I Men's Basketball Championship is the NCAA's most visible and important event. In general, it is a credit to higher education and to the NCAA, and every effort must be made to protect its integrity and its reputation.

There is a growing public concern, which I share, about the language being used by coaches and players. Sports requires sportsmanship. Sportsmanship involves not just what coaches and players do, but what they say.

Obscenities that are heard by the crowd and lip-read by millions of television viewers discredit the game, the coaches and their profession, the players and the schools they represent. Offensive language has no place in public, especially when such language is used by those who represent institutions of higher education.

This is all the more important since intercollegiate contests are watched by young people, and coaches and players are often role models.

Though I know less about this, I am told that verbal harassment also has become common practice among players — a competitive "trash talking" strategy of sorts. If so, those who respect the game should take steps to ensure that these contests reflect standards of competitive behavior consistent with good sportsmanship.

I suspect that the verbal behavior of coaches is likely to be reflected by their players. Rules that govern this behavior should be enforced and, if necessary, strengthened. A few technical fouls called on coaches and players would see this language end. We should see that competition is honorable in word and deed.

This problem is perhaps not limited to basketball. Other sports committees perhaps need to consider their own circumstances. In basketball, however, the proximity of the fans and television microphones make this issue urgent.

Sports gambling is a losing game

By Thomas R. Park
SPECIAL TO THE NCAA NEWS

Federal, state and municipal budgets are burdened by deficits and are searching desperately for new revenues that do not look like taxes.

Because of this, political courage has become necessary to forestall the economic windfall promised by sports-betting revenues. After all, the state of Florida cleverly supports education with the state-sponsored lottery proceeds, and how can you argue with a program that funds education?

The answer is that we have been led down a path that makes sports betting appear to be an acceptable, and even desirable, alternative; in reality, the question of instituting sports betting is simply a choice between right and wrong.

Scholars of sport can identify seven major trends that differentiate the Greek, Roman, Medieval, Renaissance and industrial revolution eras of sport from the post-1920 modern era.

These traits of modern sport are secularism, equality, bureaucratization or institutionalization, quantification, rationalization, specialization, and record-keeping — characteristics that, coincidentally, mirror our contemporary society at large. A key trait of the quantification issue is the increasing commercialization and professionalization of modern sport.

"The opposition to sports gambling is highly relevant to our value and heritage."

The mass media enables this monetization of sport to occur while subduing the quality and value issues with economic ones.

It is this thrust toward monetization in modern sport that predisposes us to accept the flawed logic of gambling revenues. The sports gambling camp argues a legal concept no different than parimutuel betting, casino gambling or lotteries. Such precedent makes it apparent how the passage of a United States Senate bill that would restrict sports gambling (S.474) might be more complex than a first glance would indicate in our current fragile economy.

Tragically and subtly, the values represented by institutionalized sport are being destroyed by the monetization process while we concurrently teach and reward ourselves into believing that this is acceptable.

Sports gambling is a leap in the wrong direction because it accelerates the selling of our values for the pricing of our wants.

Economic arguments have been used through history to justify prostitution, slavery and genocide by societies that lost sight of the right way. The harsh reality is that sports gambling has little to do with economics but has an enormous — but largely unappreciated — negative consequence to our social fabric.

The passage of S.474 has everything to do with who we want to be as a people. The opposition to sports gambling is highly relevant to our values and our heritage, and S.474 must be made into law if we are to lead ourselves in the right way.

Opinions

Integrity a foundation for all goals

Boyd McWhorter, former commissioner Southeastern Conference

From comments made at Mission Renewal Day at the University of Georgia

"Our mission standards of personal development, teamwork, excellence and leadership are no less important, but we should emphasize the fact that unless our programs have a solid foundation of integrity, we have no worthwhile programs at all.

"One must realize that the virtue of integrity, like those of dignity, honor and sincerity, is a trait of character which can never be given but must always be earned. It is a work ethic which demands that each of us does that which needs to be done, when it needs to be done, regardless of whether anyone else does it or not. It must be the basic characteristic of all our labors, or any professional competence which we may possess or use is reduced to naught."

Gender equity

Jill Sterkel, women's swimming coach Indiana University, Bloomington
USA Today

"People argue that as the sacred cow of all athletics departments, football, makes money and shouldn't be touched. But don't forget that intercollegiate athletics are part of the educational process. If you don't have the university, you don't have football.

"The importance of educational opportunities for athletes in football cannot be more highly valued because more people pay to watch them play. It doesn't work that way in any other part of the university. Science research brings in much more grant money than French does, but schools aren't cutting their language programs or denying students equal access to them.

"It was legislation in the form of Title IX that afforded me a scholarship without which I would never have reached the level of excellence in my sport that I did. I can guarantee you that I'd never have gone to those last three Olympics. I would have retired in order to go to college.

"Every day, I am grateful I didn't have to make that choice. I look at what I learned and accomplished in the pool and in the classroom, and I am convinced that if either were taken away, my education would be incomplete.

"An educational opportunity is an educational opportunity. To deny any part for anybody is to undermine the whole process of education."

Professional football development

Joe Paterno, football coach Pennsylvania State University
The Chronicle of Higher Education

Reacting to a possible Corporate Football Foundation, which would provide an alternative for young football players not wanting to be full-time college students:

"I have kids on my own squad, like on every other squad, who wouldn't be in college — shouldn't be in college — but are here just to play football. They are wasting their own time because they aren't getting an education that will serve them. They are wasting the faculty's time, and they are wasting university resources that could better be used on students who are at college to learn."

Olympic development

George Steinbrenner, member United States Olympic Committee
Naples (Florida) Daily News

"We should start working with the NCAA to allow our athletes to train at their facilities and coaches to have their sessions there and pay for it. It's a natural to me."

Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director
Remarks made at the convention of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics

"I suggested that perhaps the USOC should consider providing a fund to the NCAA that we could administer like we do the fund provided to us by Major League Baseball for the summer baseball leagues. We could then provide grants to schools either to start Olympic sports or to provide a grant if a school was on the verge of dropping a particular sport.

"Their reaction was favorable, and it is still being discussed. We have to start looking at all those various resources out there to help out individual institutions."

HIV message may be tailored

Information on HIV/AIDS would be tailored for distribution to coaches, student-athletes and parents under a recommendation to the NCAA Executive Committee by the Association's Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The competitive-safeguards committee made the recommendation during its June 10-12 meeting in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho.

Currently, athletics directors and trainers receive information on the subject from the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook. Under the recommendation, the targeted audiences would receive HIV/AIDS information tailored to the needs of those groups.

The information has been reviewed and approved by Dr. D. Peter Drotman, who is affiliated with the Division of HIV/AIDS at the Center for Disease Control, and Dr. David E. Rogers of the Cornell University Medical College.

During its meeting, the committee also began preparing topics for consideration by the Presidents Commission's subcommittee on strategic planning relating to the welfare of the student-athlete.

In its preliminary work, the committee has proposed such topics as alcohol use and abuse, unrealistic or unhealthy emphasis on winning by coaches and student-athletes, HIV/AIDS and other blood-borne diseases, spring football, equity in medical care, and selected issues currently addressed in the Sports Medicine Handbook.

In another action, the committee changed the name of its research subcommittee to better distinguish it from the NCAA Research Committee, which it assists in the review of sports-medicine proposals. The subcommittee now will be known as the sports sciences research subcommittee.

Sports sciences research

The sports sciences research subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports discussed the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook, eating disorders, long-range planning, research and the Injury Surveillance System during its recent meeting in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho. The subcommittee took the following actions:

Sports Medicine Handbook

- Reviewed major revisions of the policy statements associated with HIV/AIDS and intercollegiate athletics, helmet fitting and removal, skin infections in wrestling, medical evaluations, and records, as well as several minor changes in other guidelines.

- Regarding helmets, the current statement, which says that a helmet should never be removed when there is a potential head/neck injury, has been tempered to say that the helmet should not be removed on the field unless there is a blocked airway that is inaccessible with the helmet on. On the subject of skin infections in wrestling, the subcommittee reviewed guidelines that will be included in the sport's championships handbook next year. Regarding medical evaluations and records, information was added that addressed the confidentiality of training-room records from a legal perspective.

- Recommended that two new guidelines be added to the book: use of local anesthetics in athletics and use of injectable corticosteroids in athletics.

- Recommended that a revised edition be distributed this fall after review by the NCAA Council.

- Recommended that an assessment instrument be distributed with the next edition. This instrument will be used to evaluate who uses the book, how they use it and how useful they find it.

Eating disorders

- Recommended reviewing the guidelines developed at the June American College of Sports Medicine symposium concerning the "female triad"—disordered eating, amenorrhea and osteoporosis—before taking actions in these areas.

- Recommended repeating a survey conducted two years ago of member institutions regarding prevalence of eating disorders.

- Expressed interest in obtaining information on the number of institutions that have a program assisting eating-disordered athletes.

Research

The subcommittee recommended to the NCAA Re- search Committee that it:

- Develop a system of review of interim and final research reports to provide feedback to the researcher and to create a record for applications for repeat funding.

- Produce a report for the membership emphasizing the application of research, for publication in The NCAA News or the Sports Science Education Newsletter.

Injury Surveillance System

The subcommittee:

- Noted the extremely high injury rate in spring football and recommended a review of this activity by the College Football Association and American Football Coaches Association.

- Endorsed cooperation with Ohio State University and University of Nevada, Las Vegas, researchers in a detailed analysis of ISS football data.

- Agreed to develop a validity check for ISS questions.

- Recommended development of a questionnaire for track and field (indoor or outdoor) or cross country for the 1992-93 season.

- Recommended development of graphics to present data for annual ISS summary reports.

- Acknowledged the protective nature of mouth guards with respect to oral injuries, but recommended that there be no endorsement of mandatory use of mouth guards in women's basketball, in light of the relatively low incidence of oral injury in the sport and the lack of mouth-guard options currently available exclusively for women.

- Commended the NCAA Men's Ice Hockey Rules Committee for recommending the use of a helmet approved by the Hockey Equipment Certification Council (HECC) for all players, but recommended that the rules committee make this certification mandatory.

Other actions

The subcommittee also addressed future projects for the competitive-safeguards committee. Goals listed include developing a public-service announcement outlining general NCAA sports sciences activities; better access to and understanding of Association sports-sciences educational materials by student-athletes, coaches and conferences, and investigation of possible Association participation in the 1996 Olympic Congress in Atlanta.

Drug education and testing

The drug-education and drug-testing subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports approved undertaking the initial phase of a laboratory audit program at its recent meeting in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho.

That phase includes requesting data packages from negative and positive tests from the NCAA labs, on an unannounced basis. The subcommittee also noted that a proposal for blind quality-control testing would be reevaluated in one year after the College of American Pathologists' (CAP) certification program begins.

The subcommittee also will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that, effective for the 1993-94 testing year and beyond, all NCAA labs be accredited by the CAP.

In other actions, the subcommittee:

- Did not support a request to develop NCAA legislation banning the use of tobacco products during the season (games and practice), but instead asked conferences to continue their efforts to institute such bans.

- Agreed that in the year-round drug-testing program, when it is expanded to include track and field, 24 football players would be tested regardless of whether the school sponsored track and field; six men would be tested if the institution sponsored men's track and field, and six women if the institution sponsored women's track and field. The subcommittee also agreed that if the institution provides fewer than six scholarships to men or women track and field athletes, nonscholarship athletes would be selected to complete the list of athletes to be tested.

- Noted that it may not be possible to test all Division I track and field programs the first year of the program and that it is unlikely that there will be a minimum 25 percent repeat rate in testing, as there is for football.

- Recommended to the Executive Committee that the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee be required to issue credentials and game tickets to drug-testing crews and couriers for any drug testing conducted at the Final Four.

- Asked the national office staff to study past testing at water polo championships to determine if a request by the NCAA Men's Water Polo Committee to change the late-night testing cutoff to 8 p.m. has merit.

- Modified drug-testing protocol to allow next-day testing for games that are delayed until after 9 p.m., regardless of whether they were "scheduled" for 9 p.m. or later.

- Decreased the number of student-athletes tested at gymnastics championships to two per event.

- Agreed to pursue publication of NCAA drug-testing information, beginning with development of a article regarding the first six years of NCAA drug testing for publication in a medical journal.

- Agreed that in cases when a testosterone/epitestosterone (T/E) ratio is greater than 6 to 1, a test for Human Chorionic Gonadotropin (HCG) will be run.

- Adopted new International Olympic Committee guidelines on T/Es and use of epitestosterone. The subcommittee noted that the IOC T/E policy had been adopted by the NCAA, but had not been incorporated into the banned-drug list.

- Asked that HCG, epitestosterone and erythropoietin be added to the survey instrument for the 1992-93 Michigan State University replication study.

- Asked the national office staff to again attempt to write legislation pertaining to sanctions for positive tests, noting that it is the committee's intent that a student-athlete testing positive lose a season of competition regardless of redshirt status.

- Accepted a final report from Delta State University for a drug education program grant.

- Accepted a University of Virginia report on the first year of its A.P.P.I.E. program, which provides training to schools that wish to develop drug- and alcohol-prevention programs.

- Agreed to partially fund the third year of a program-development proposal from Pennsylvania State University, noting the full funding may be given after the committee reviews any proposals at its January 1993 meeting.

- Asked the staff to report at the competitive-safeguards committee's January 1993 meeting on discussions with the Betty Ford Center about evaluating the Professional In Residence (PIR) program.

- Established administrative procedures and revised protocol for drug-testing appeals based on recommendations from NCAA legal counsel.

San Diego State proceeds with construction of arena

San Diego State University received clearance to build a 12,000-seat sports and entertainment arena when a state appeals court rejected arguments that the project would adversely affect the surrounding neighborhood.

Construction of the $25 million arena is expected to begin by the end of this summer, according to

The Associated Press. Officials said June 2 they hope to have it finished in time for the 1994-95 basketball season.

The Aztecs have been playing 10 miles away at the 13,000-seat San Diego Sports Arena, but they plan to play in 3,668-seat Peterson Gym on campus until the new arena is completed.

The arena will be part of the Student Activity Center, which will also include locker rooms, classrooms, offices and a weight-training facility.

Community groups fear the center, combined with other redevelopment projects planned by San Diego State, will overwhelm their area with traffic and other problems associated with crowds.

In a suit filed last year, two community groups argued that the university neglected to follow adequately the requirements of the California Environmental Quality Act, a set of land-use controls.

But the Fourth District Court of Appeals issued a ruling May 29 that San Diego State met the CEQA requirements. The panel affirmed a Superior Court decision last year favoring the university in the suit.

The Student Activity Center, with a total cost of $38 million, will be financed chiefly through a student fee of $94 a year. The university hopes to sell bonds within the next few weeks to cover the project's construction costs.

Hockey panels discuss championship formats

No changes recommended in Division I

The present regional format for the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship will continue for at least one more year.

The Division I Men's Ice Hockey Committee, meeting June 15-18 in Kansas City, Missouri, decided to evaluate the present format for one more year and then decide if it will be used in future championships.

Currently, the tournament format features regional play at two predetermined sites, with six teams assigned to each site. Single-elimination play is used, with the top two seeds in each region receiving a bye in the first round.

After spending a substantial period of time considering the use of on-campus rather than off-campus sites for regional competition, the committee decided to continue to use neutral sites.

The committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that Joe Louis Arena in Detroit and the Centrum in Worcester, Massachusetts, be selected as sites for the 1993 West and East regionals, respectively. The regionals will be March 26-27, 1993.

The committee did, however, leave open the possibility that it

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 15-18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Committee:

- Voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the championship bracket be expanded to 16 teams, citing clear support for expansion by the American Hockey Coaches Association.
- Voted to recommend that the two-referee/one-linesman officiating system be used for the championship regionals and finals and noted that expenses for officials will not increase in 1993.
- Voted to recommend that coaches not be required to attend the officiating-improvement clinics and that the clinics include more on-ice demonstrations and intensive discussions about officiating mechanics.
- Voted to continue to use the Ratings Percentage Index as a guideline in the selection process and expressed the view that the selection-criteria system is working satisfactorily.
- Voted to assign the best officials for the regionals and championship semifinals and finals, regardless of whether an official subsequently works both the semifinal and championship game.
- Voted to provide automatic qualification to the Eastern College Athletic Conference, Hockey East, and the Central Collegiate Hockey and Western Collegiate Hockey Associations.
- Noted that a recent Executive Committee decision regarding polls would preclude the NCAA from conducting a Division I poll in the future.
- Noted that the selection announcement for the 1993 championship will be made from Minneapolis, at 8 p.m. Central time Sunday, March 21.

may decide to conduct the regionals at on-campus sites after 1993, noting that the financial health of the championship must be maintained.

The semifinals and final of the 1993 Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship will be played April 1 and 3 at the Bradley Center in Milwaukee.

Plans made for Division II title series

For the first time since 1984, the NCAA will sponsor a Division II Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

At its June 15-18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Divisions II and III Men's Ice Hockey Committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee a format in which the two top schools nationally will be selected to participate in the 1993 Division II championship. The championship was authorized by a vote of the Association's membership at the 1992 NCAA Convention.

The championship, involving two games between the teams plus a deciding minigame if needed, would be played on the campus of one of the competing institutions either March 12-13 or March 13-14.

From 1978 to 1984, the NCAA sponsored a Division II championship in ice hockey and crowned five different national champions. The University of Massachusetts at Lowell won three titles. Merrimack College, Mankato State University, Rochester Institute of Technology and Bemidji State University each won one championship.

The only schools set to sponsor Division II hockey in 1992-93 that participated in the tournament between 1978 and 1984 are New Hampshire College and Bemidji State. The other eligible schools are American International College, Assumption College, Bentley College, Mercyhurst College, Quinnipiac College, St. Anselm College, St. Michael's College and Stonehill College.

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 15-18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the NCAA Divisions II and III Men's Ice Hockey Committee:

- Voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the traveling party (26) and officials' fees (referee: $150; linesman: $75) remain the same in the Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship.
- Voted to recommend that automatic qualification be granted to the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference and the State University of New York Athletic Conference for the 1993 Division III championship. In a related matter, the committee agreed to propose to the Executive Committee that the Northern Collegiate Hockey Association receive a one-year waiver of Bylaw 31.3.4.2, which requires a conference to have six members that sponsor the sport on an intercollegiate basis and to have six members eligible for the NCAA championship to receive automatic qualification. Currently, the NCHA has only five member institutions.
- Decided to conduct a national Division II poll that would include five teams. The first poll would be released December 7, 1992. The following polls would be released weekly beginning January 11. The two regional Division III hockey polls also would follow this schedule.
- Agreed to support the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Committee's proposal that officials be required to attend only one of the officiating-improvement clinics that will be offered this fall. Coaches would not be required to attend if the proposal is adopted.

Compliance briefs

General Information

NCAA Graduation-Rates Disclosure software: Requests for the NCAA Graduation-Rates Disclosure software currently are being accepted by the compliance services staff. The computer software (for IBM and compatible personal computers) is intended to assist institutional administrators in completing the 1992-93 NCAA Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form (Form 92-6). If interested, compliance coordinators of NCAA Division I member institutions are asked to complete the request form that was mailed May 8 and return it to the national office. The software is scheduled for distribution in early July.

NCAA Guide to Financial Aid: The 1992-93 NCAA Guide to Financial Aid was mailed to member institutions and conference offices June 2. A new section (Understanding General Financial Aid Terms) defines general financial aid terms not specifically related to NCAA regulations.

The NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, which recommended including the additional information in the guide, developed the section (Chapter 10) primarily to assist athletics administrators in understanding the technical yet fundamental aspects of financial aid programs. Chapter 10, although helpful in understanding the awarding of financial aid, is included for informational purposes only. Because the information is not related to NCAA legislation, any questions regarding this chapter should be directed to the financial aid office on campus.

Compliance strategies

Sports camps and clinics: In recent years, the number of sports camps and clinics has increased. Coaches have recognized the potential financial rewards and recruiting advantages that can result from the operation of a highly successful camp. To avoid the potential abuses associated with the conduct and administration of sports camps and clinics, institutional administrators may wish to consider the following educational and procedural efforts.

- Designate someone to coordinate and oversee camps/clinics on campus and the involvement of coaches and student-athletes in private and/or other external camps/clinics.
- Develop formal, written procedures for coaches to follow while serving as camp/clinic operators or employees.
- Subject all revenues and expenditures associated with the operation of an institutional camp to the institution's normal accounting practices and procedures.

■ Provide rules-education sessions (including rules education materials) specific to sports camps and clinics for all staff members conducting or employed at a camp/clinic.

■ Require coaches who own or operate a camp/clinic to submit a camp/clinic description that outlines, for example, registration fees, employee profiles, age/grade level of campers, camp/clinic brochures, schedule of activities, facilities/equipment, awards and concessions.

The sports camps and clinics program (including warning signs to determine whether problems exist and additional compliance strategies) is available in the 1990-91 NCAA Guide to Rules Compliance and may be requested from the NCAA compliance services staff.

This material was provided by the NCAA compliance services staff as an aid to member institutions and conference offices. Institutions or conference offices with questions or issues concerning the content addressed in this column may contact John H. Leavens, assistant executive director for compliance services, at the NCAA national office.

Lacrosse focuses on fine points

Much of the discussion and actions by the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee at its June 7-11 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, focused on fine-tuning the sport's championships.

The committee voted unanimously to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the 1993 Division III championship game again be staged at the site of the Division I championship, as it was this year. Next year's Division I championship will be at the University of Maryland, College Park.

This year's Division III championship game, played during the Memorial Day weekend at the University of Pennsylvania, was the first to be played at the same site as the Division I semifinals and final.

The contest, which matched Nazareth College (New York) and Roanoke College on the Sunday between Saturday's Division I semifinals and Monday's Division I final, drew a Division III men's lacrosse record attendance of 6,741—more than any other Division III championship in any sport this year.

The committee also discussed administration of a Division II championship to be reestablished in 1993. Team selection will take place on the same day that Divisions I and III participants are determined, and the championship game will be conducted the following weekend.

In other matters, the committee voted to recommend that, effective in 1994, the team selected to represent the Division I West region will compete in a "play-in" game against the 12th team selected for

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 7-11 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee:

- Voted to announce the most outstanding player in each of the division championship games during the postgame press conference.
- Voted to permit fans attending the Division I semifinal contests to leave and then return to the stadium between games.
- Voted not to release officiating assignments until the pregame meeting before each tournament game.
- After a review of financial projections and last year's financial reports, voted to recommend reducing the per diem from $120 to $80. The committee noted that Bylaw 18.2.11 requires championships that do not meet the minimum sponsorship percentage requirements of Bylaw 18.2.3 to generate net receipts.

In other championships-related discussions, the committee discussed:

- Selection criteria and use of the strength-of-schedule and power-rating indices. The committee stressed that these indices are used only as a guideline.
- A recommendation by the University of Maryland, College Park, that a limited number of reserved seats be sold in advance for the 1993 championship.
- The concept of developing a "model championship," which would assist the committee in determining future championship sites.

Regarding other issues, the committee:

- Reviewed applications for the positions of secretary-rules editor and national coordinator of officials, noting that James A. Grube and James Garvey have resigned from those respective positions.
- Expressed concern that some institutions continue to use helmets not certified by the National Operating Committee on Standards for Athletic Equipment (NOCSAE). Last year, use of NOCSAE-approved helmets was made mandatory under NCAA playing rules.
- Expressed concern about the relationship between officials and coaches and noted that it would discuss sportsmanship of coaches with the United States Lacrosse Coaches Association.

Regarding rules, the committee voted to:

- Attempt to discourage discussion between coaches and officials during games by stating the following in the rules book:

"Questions from coaches should be addressed only after the four-minute warning, and a representative from both teams may be present while these questions are discussed. Officials should never entertain any questions until a representative of the other team is given the opportunity to be present."

■ Respond to the NCAA Executive Committee's directive to address HIV/AIDS by including this note in the rules book: "Whenever a player suffers a laceration or wound where oozing or bleeding occurs, the practice or game should be stopped at the earliest possible time, and the player should leave the field of play and be given appropriate medical treatment. The athlete should not return to the game or practice without the approval of medical personnel."

■ Limit coaches' access to the field of play. Under the change, a coach will not be able to enter the field of play without the permission of an official, except during half time, to attend to an injured player or to warm up a goalkeeper between quarters or during timeouts.

■ Clarify timeouts in dead-ball situations and during play. If the language in last year's rules book is taken literally, head coaches are not allowed to call timeouts during dead-ball situations, although the rule has been interpreted to allow them to do so. The committee voted to change the language to reflect that interpretation, thereby giving the head coach the explicit right to call a timeout in dead-ball situations. Any member of either team who is on the field during a dead ball also may call a timeout. During play, team timeouts still may be called from anywhere on the field by a member of the team with the ball who is on the field, or by that team's head coach; however, during those timeouts (and between periods), coaches shall remain in their respective coaching areas.

■ Change the situations that stop a slow-whistle situation. Under last year's rules, two of the situations that would stop play were: 1) The ball is outside the goal area when a foul is committed, and the attacking team fails to promptly move the ball into the goal area, or 2) The attacking team fails to continuously attack the goal. With the change, these two situations no longer will stop play.

■ Clarify guidelines regarding the optional wearing of under-jerseys, compression shorts and sweat pants. All three, if worn, must be a solid color limited to white, gray or one of the team's official colors. If an individual player wears more than one of these optional pieces of clothing, they need not all be the same color, but if one player on a team wears one color of one of the garments, all of the players on that team wearing that garment must wear the same color.

■ Require flat-iron goals used on natural turf to be attached to the ground with ground anchors.

the tournament. The intent is to provide the West representative with the opportunity to host a tournament game, thus giving that program and NCAA lacrosse more exposure in the West. Additionally, the committee noted that it believes the West representative would be more competitive against the 12th-seeded team than it has been in its usual first-round game against the tournament's fifth-seeded team.

Women's lacrosse selection criteria reviewed

Difficulties with using strength of schedule as one of the criteria for selecting teams to participate in National Collegiate and Division III women's championships were addressed by the NCAA Women's Lacrosse Committee during its June 16-19 meeting in Newport, Rhode Island.

Schedule strength is listed in Bylaw 31.3.3 among criteria approved by the NCAA Executive Committee for use in selecting championships participants, and it is one of the criteria employed by the lacrosse committee.

But the committee, concerned about the lack of a definition of strength of schedule, plans to address the problem with research that will enable the committee to establish a clear meaning of the term for its sport.

Such a definition would be distributed to institutions sponsoring women's lacrosse, which then could use the information to arrange schedules that would maximize chances of being selected for championships competition.

In another matter related to championships, the committee agreed to send score-reporting forms to coaches in mid-February, rather than the previous date of March 6. The committee hopes that coaches will send schedules to the appropriate regional advisory committee members earlier than the previous deadline of April 3, thereby improving the tournament selection system.

The committee also discussed the role of a team's administrative representative during a tournament game. The committee emphasized that all teams must have an accompanying administrator present. That administrator will be responsible for maintaining proper bench decorum, adherence of uniforms to rules, administration of the awards ceremony and ensuring that only members of the official traveling party are on the sidelines during competition.

The coaches' area on the field also was discussed. The committee wants to make rules regarding the area to which coaches are confined during competition (based on an imaginary line extending from the front edge of the scorers' table) a point of emphasis for next year's championships.

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 16-19 meeting in Newport, Rhode Island, the NCAA Women's Lacrosse Committee:

■ Reviewed sponsorship numbers, noting that there are 111 institutions with intercollegiate lacrosse programs. In light of current concerns about gender equity, the committee noted that sponsorship of women's lacrosse would be an attractive option for institutions interested in expanding women's athletics programs because the sport is relatively inexpensive and allows for a relatively large roster of 20 to 25 players.

■ Requested that the NCAA championships staff study pairing teams from different regions in tournament first-round games in cases where doing so would reduce travel costs. Currently, the sport's championships handbook states that "teams will be placed in the brackets according to their geographic regions."

■ Agreed that the selection process for championships officials will remain unchanged next year. That process, which was new this season, consists of preselection of all officials for all rounds by the committee, using coaches' recommendations as a guide.

■ Agreed to send proposed-budget forms for championships to both the athletics director or senior woman administrator and the head coach of women's lacrosse in an attempt to stimulate more bidding to host tournament first-round games.

■ Increased the size of the "most outstanding players" team for the championships from six to nine.

■ Discussed possible format changes for future championships, such as playing night games and providing a day of rest between games, but decided to maintain the same championships formats for 1993.

Track committee suggests more scorekeeping

Citing fan interest in team competition, the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee is recommending that member institutions use some method of scoring when conducting meets.

At its meeting June 11-14 in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee expressed concern that too many collegiate track and field meets are not scored and concluded that the sport would be better served if all collegiate meets make use of some method of team scoring.

"As with most of the collegiate track and field community, (the committee) feels that part of what makes the sport interesting to the public at large is not only being able to determine winners of individual events, but also winners of team competition," said Mark T. Young, women's track and field coach at Yale University and chair of the committee.

Rule 7-1 of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field and Cross Country Rules addresses scoring and provides guidelines for one method. However, the rules book does not require, but only recommends, use of that system.

The committee acknowledged that there are a number of alternative methods that can be and are

Other highlights

During its June 11-14 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the NCAA Men's and Women's Track Committee took the following actions pertaining to rules:

- Adopted a position statement that calls for the removal of spectators, coaches or institutional representatives who act in an unacceptable, unprofessional or unsportsmanlike manner.
- Recommended that the first hurdle in the steeplechase be at least 5.00 meters (16 feet, 4 1/4 inches) in width (Rule 2-3-1).
- Decided that runners receiving batons in a relay event must maintain their positions in the exchange zone (relative to team positions) when the incoming runner is within 50 meters of the exchange zone (Rule 5-8-3).
- Recommended an increase from three to four in the number of competitors who advance in each heat in the preliminaries of the 1,500-, 3,000- or 5,000-meter runs and the 3,000-meter steeplechase in championships meets (Rule 5-11-10-b).
- Determined that competitors in an event may be arranged in flights no smaller than five or larger than nine individuals (Rule 6-3-1).
- Recommended that the crossbar for the high jump be raised in increments of five centimeters (2 inches) (Rule 6-4-2).

■ Determined that a mark indicating a jumper's approach in the high jump must be made with tape approved as a jumping aid by meet management. The use of unacceptable material will lead to disqualification (Rule 6-4-5).

■ Recommended that the bar for the pole vault be raised in increments of 15 centimeters (6 inches) (Rule 6-5-1).

■ Determined that a mark indicating a vaulter's approach in the pole vault must be made with a material approved as a vaulting aid by meet management. The use of unacceptable material will lead to disqualification (Rule 6-5-4).

■ Determined that marks adjacent to the runway or landing surface in the javelin throw must be made with a material approved as a throwing aid by meet management. The use of unacceptable material will lead to disqualification (Rule 6-9-2).

■ Determined that in competitions involving multiple events, each competitor in the high jump and pole vault will be allowed three minutes between consecutive attempts (Rule 9-2-2-g).

■ Recommended that a minimum of 30 feet of overhead clearance be provided free of obstruction (lights, ceiling, etc.) at meets (Rule 10-2-5).

being used, and did not recommend one universal formula.

In another action, the committee voted to begin referring to "last-chance meets" as "final qualifying meets." It also decided that the entry form currently used for indoor and outdoor championships now will be referred to as an "eligibility form."

Division II subcommittee

The Division II subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee took the following actions during its meeting in Kansas City, Missouri:

■ Recommended the following cross country regional sites to the NCAA Executive Committee for 1992: Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania (East); Mississippi College (South); Ferris State University (Great Lakes); University of Nebraska, Omaha (Central), and Portland State University (West).

■ Recommended that Portland State be the host site for the 1993 cross country championships.

■ Voted to recognize only those qualifying performances achieved at "last-chance meets" that have been registered with the NCAA.

■ Decided to conduct a survey later this summer to determine interest in changing the women's 3,000-meter run to 5,000 meters.

■ Recommended that Saginaw Valley State University be the host site for the 1994 indoor championships.

Division I subcommittee

The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee took the following actions during its meeting in Kansas City, Missouri:

■ Voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, be the host site of the 1994 cross country championships.

■ Voted to shorten the outdoor championships from four to three days, effective in 1993. Under the three-day format, horizontal field events (long jump, triple jump, shot put, discus throw, hammer throw and javelin throw) would include trials and finals only; vertical jumps (high jump and pole vault) would consist of finals only; the 400 meters, 400-meter hurdles, 800 meters, 1,500 meters, 3,000 meters and 3,000-meter steeplechase would be reduced to qualifying and finals rounds only; the short sprints (100- and 200-meter run) and hurdles (100 and 110 meters) would comprise three rounds; the 10,000-meter run would be a final-only event; the 5,000-meter run would be run as a final only with an option for trials depending on size of the field, and the decathlon and heptathlon would overlap.

■ Voted to resubmit a recommendation to the Executive Committee that would require a school to participate in at least the minimum number of intercollegiate contests (against four-year, degree-granting collegiate institutions) stated in Bylaw 20.9.3.3 each year in order to participate in the national championships. Currently, under Bylaw 20.9.3.3, an institution is required to compete in a minimum of 18 contests (six cross country, six indoor track and six outdoor track) to meet membership sports-sponsorship requirements.

Division III subcommittee

The Division III subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee took the following actions during its recent meeting:

■ Voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that Grinnell College be the host site of the 1993 cross country championships and that the University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh, and North Central College be the sites of the 1994 indoor and outdoor championships, respectively.

■ Decided to implement a declaration procedure utilizing fax machines for the indoor and outdoor championships. A mailing reviewing the procedure and other items (revised proof-of-performance form, standards, etc.) will be sent to coaches later this summer.

NACDA elects Jones as president for '92-'93

James L. Jones, director of athletics at Ohio State University, has been elected to serve as president of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics for 1992-93.

Jones has served for the past year as NACDA's first vice-president. He has been athletics director at Ohio State since 1987.

Jones

president, and Eugene D. Smith, athletics director at Eastern Michigan University, third vice-president. Elizabeth A. Kruczek, director of athletics at Fitchburg State College, enters the fourth year of her five-year term as secretary.

■ Eligibility appeals

In cases involving prospective student-athletes, current NCAA policy allows the NCAA Eligibility Committee either to restore the involved prospect with all eligibility remaining at the violating institution or to render the prospective student-athlete permanently ineligible at that institution.

Accordingly, because the eligibility ramifications of violations that involve prospects and enrolled student-athletes are treated differently, those cases that involve prospects are published separately from the other matters.

Also, note that any actions taken by the institution, conference or NCAA Committee on Infractions regarding the institution's responsibility for the occurrence of the violation that caused the ineligibility of the student-athlete are reported along with the publication of the particular eligibility case.

Eligibility Appeals Concerning Recruiting Violations
Involving Prospective Student-Athletes

DIVISION I

No.	Sport	Citation	Facts	NCAA eligibility action	NCAA action regarding institutional responsibility	Institution/conference action
1.	Men's soccer	B 13.01.2.2	Head coach purchased meal for prospective student-athlete (PSA) and his mother during PSA's unofficial visit to campus. PSA re-paid cost of meals.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
2.	Wrestling	B 13.01.4, 13.2.4.1 and 13.5.2	Student-athlete (SA) was employed by head coach on corn-detasseling crew during summer before SA's senior year in high school. Head coach also provided SA with one meal during winter of same year. Additionally, during official paid visit, SA had off-campus contact with institutional professor.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.	For these and other violations, the institution applied the following corrective and disciplinary actions: (1) institution required head coach to pay cost of institution's internal investigation up to a maximum of $12,000; (2) head coach's salary will be frozen for the 1991-92 academic year and the following two years; (3) head coach will not recruit off campus for two years; (4) head coach is on probation for three years; (5) no new financial aid awards will be permitted in wrestling for the 1992-93 academic year; (6) institution will disassociate representatives of institution's athletics interests involved in violations of NCAA rules and regulations.
3.	Men's basketball	B 13.02.4.4	Head coach met with PSA twice during dead period before spring National Letter of Intent signing date; PSA had signed with institution during fall signing period.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.	Conference required institution to count contacts as one of 16 official paid visits and required coach to pass recruiting-rules test.
4.	Men's ice hockey	B 13.02.4.4	Head coach had contact with PSA during dead period before spring National Letter of Intent signing date. Head coach, who was a friend of family for several years, stopped by PSA's house for dessert. PSA had signed a National Letter of Intent before violation.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
5.	Women's track, indoor; women's track, outdoor	B 13.02.4.4 and 3.1.1.1	PSA, who was a junior in high school, made an unofficial visit to campus and met with head coach during dead period.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
6.	Men's basketball	B 13.1.6.2	Head coach called out to PSA while young man was participating in warm-ups before all-star basketball contest. PSA had signed National Letter of Intent before impermissible contact.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
7.	Women's swimming	B 13.12.1 and 13.13.1.2	PSA swam for local swim club, which became an institutional entity because of head coach's involvement and because the institution did the club's bookkeeping (including salary disbursements). Swim club otherwise was separate from institution.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
8.	Women's soccer	B 13.4.1	Coaching staff mistakenly mailed recruiting materials to PSAs before September 1 of PSAs' junior year in high school.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
9.	Women's soccer	B 13.4.1-(a)	PSA received recruiting material as a sophomore in high school. Current SA had referred PSA to head coach and had assured head coach that the PSA was a junior.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
10.	Men's basketball	B 13.4.1-(i)	PSA received a birthday card from the coaching staff.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.	Institution issued written reprimand to involved coaches.

DIVISION II

11.	Football	B 13.02.4.4	PSA had contact with coaching staff immediately before 8 a.m. on National Letter of Intent signing date.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
12.	Men's basketball	B 13.11.1	Assistant coach commented about PSA's athletics ability to a reporter. Coach was unaware that he was speaking to a reporter or that his comments would be published.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
13.	Football	B 13.1.1.3	Former head coach had several contacts with transfer SA before receiving written release from initial institution. Coach did not believe a release from NAIA institution was necessary because SA initiated contacts and expressed intent to transfer to institution, which was 40 minutes from SA's hometown. Institution obtained a written release from initial institution.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.

Eligibility Appeals
Other Than Those Involving Recruiting Violations

DIVISION I

1.	Women's golf	B 12.1.1	Before enrollment, foreign SA shot a hole-in-one and won a car in a golf tournament. PSA did not accept the car but gave it to her country club.	Eligibility restored.
2.	Men's ice hockey	B 12.1.1, 12.2.1.1, 12.2.1.3 and 12.2.3.2.4	SA attended major junior A training camp in September 1990 and participated in three exhibition contests. SA visited another major junior A team for three or four days in the summer of 1991, and received transportation and lodging expenses in September 1991. SA did not sign a contract with either team.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from competition during his first year in residence at an NCAA institution and is charged with the loss of one season of competition under the provisions of B 12.2.3.2.4.1.
3.	Men's ice hockey	B 12.1.1, 12.2.1.1, 12.2.1.3 and 12.2.3.2.4	SA attended training camp and participated in three contests (two exhibition and one regular season) with a major junior A team in September 1988.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first three regularly scheduled intercollegiate contests. (Note: Because SA participated before January 11, 1989, provisions of B 12.2.3.2.4.1 did not apply.)
4.	Men's ice hockey	B 12.1.1, 12.2.1.2 and 12.2.1.3	SA had an eight-day tryout in October 1991 with an East Coast Hockey League professional team, during which he participated in one exhibition contest and received travel, room and board expenses. SA had attended collegiate institution before tryout but was not enrolled at the time.	Eligibility restored after SA completes transfer year in residence and is charged with the loss of one season of competition.

NCAA awards 68 postgraduate scholarships

The NCAA has awarded postgraduate scholarships to 68 student-athletes—34 men and 34 women—in sports other than football and basketball in which the Association conducts championships.

The $5,000 scholarships are awarded to student-athletes who maintain at least a 3.000 cumulative grade-point average (4.000 scale) and perform with distinction in varsity competition.

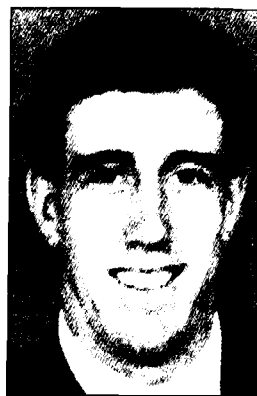

The NCAA annually awards 125 postgraduate scholarships. In addition to the following 68 winners, 29 awards were presented earlier this year to student-athletes in football and 28 in basketball at NCAA member institutions.

Through this year, the Association has awarded postgraduate scholarships to 2,354 student-athletes. These student-athletes have received $5,114,000 in scholarship assistance since the program began in 1964.

Following are some of the accomplishments of the 1992 postgraduate scholarship winners in sports other than football and basketball:

Chesbro

Holloway

Keswick

McIlquham

Men's Division I

Mark C. Brandenburg (baseball, Texas Tech University, 3.250 GPA in finance)—Brandenburg was a third-team all-American and first-team all-Southwest Athletic Conference selection in 1991. A two-year starter, the pitcher posted a 12-4 record, 3.12 earned-run average and struck out 87 in 147 innings in 1991. He was a conference all-academic selection in 1991 and 1992 and a member of the Texas Tech dean's list twice. Brandenburg transferred to Texas Tech from Panola Junior College in 1991. In 1989 and 1990, he was the recipient of the Buddy Lowry Endowment Award, which is given to the outstanding scholar-athlete at Panola. Brandenburg will pursue a master's degree in business.

Stephen P. Sawyer (baseball, Colorado State University, 3.950 GPA in biochemistry)—Sawyer was a three-time first-team all-Western Athletic Conference academic honoree and three-time recipient of the WAC Scholar-Athlete Award. A three-year starter at third base, he led the team in hitting as a sophomore with a .333 batting average and set the school mark for most assists by a third baseman in a season with 98 in 1991. He was a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society, Golden Key National Honor Society and Outstanding College Students of America. Sawyer plans to study medicine.

Scott A. Keswick (gymnastics, University of California, Los Angeles, 3.141 GPA in mathematics/applied sciences)—Keswick earned eight all-America honors, including five during the 1991 NCAA championships. Named the 1991 athlete of the year for artistic gymnastics by the U.S. Olympic Committee, Keswick was a two-time NCAA champion (parallel bars in 1991 and rings in 1992) and three-time runner-up (parallel bars in 1992 and all-around in 1991 and 1992). A three-year member of the U.S. national team, he was named to the Pacific 10 Conference all-academic team in 1992. Keswick will study mathematics and economics.

Joel C. Miller (gymnastics, U.S. Air Force Academy, 3.570 GPA in astronautical engineering)—Miller won two Western Athletic Conference rings titles and was named Air Force's outstanding gymnast in 1991 and 1992. A four-time WAC scholar-athlete and a three-time all-academic selection of the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches (Men), Miller set school records on rings (9.90) and parallel bars (9.50) in 1992. He was named to the dean's list every semester of attendance at the academy and served as commander of the Basic Cadet Training "D Squadron" in the summer of 1991. Miller hopes to pursue a master's degree in aerospace engineering.

Andrea Cecchi (swimming, UCLA, 3.422 GPA in kinesiology)—Cecchi was a three-time NCAA champion, winning the 1991 and 1992 100-yard breaststroke titles and the 1992 200-yard breaststroke crown. A member of the 1992 Italian Olympic team, he holds the Italian short-course record in the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke. A 1991 first-team academic all-American and 1991-92 selection to the Pacific 10 Conference all-academic team, he served as a volunteer with the Community Outreach/Homeless Feeding Program. Cecchi will pursue a career in sports medicine.

Jeffrey R. Thibault (swimming, University of Texas at Austin, 3.250 GPA in finance)—Thibault helped Texas to three NCAA team titles and was a member of two winning relay squads (400-yard medley in 1990 and 200-yard medley in 1991). A four-year letter-winner, he was a seven-time Southwest Athletic Conference champion and a bronze medalist at the 1991 Pan Pacific Games. The conference record-holder in the 100- and 200-yard backstroke, he served as Texas' cocaptain in 1991-92. He was the recipient of the 1992 SWC Scholar-Athlete Award, given to a student-athlete with an outstanding record for the year in athletics, scholarship and leadership. Thibault is interested in a career in business.

Matthew A. Deardorff (track and field/cross country, Bucknell University, 3.900 GPA in chemistry and biology)—Deardorff was a first-team academic all-America selection in 1991. A three-time all-East Coast Conference and three-time all-Patriot League honoree, he won three league titles in 1991, claiming the indoor 3,000-meter run, outdoor 5,000-meter run and cross country championships. Recipient of the President's Award for Distinguished Academic Achievement on three occasions, he was a member of the Student Medical Service Advisory Committee, Mortar Board and Student Medical Service Review Committee. Deardorff will study medicine at the University of Pennsylvania.

Anders O. K. Halvorsen (track and field, Northeastern University, 3.424 GPA in political science)—A 1991 all-American, Halvorsen was a seven-time North Atlantic Conference champion, winning four indoor crowns and three outdoor titles in the 35-pound weight throw and hammer throw, respectively. The conference record-holder in both events, he was a seven-time all-New England Conference and all-NAC honoree. He was a member of the dean's list every semester at Northeastern. Halvorsen intends to pursue a master's degree in international relations/diplomacy.

Michael M. Holloway (track and field, University of Florida, 3.500 GPA in zoology)—Holloway received his bachelor's degree in June 1991 and is currently enrolled in medical school. A three-time all-American in the pole vault, he won three Southeastern Conference outdoor titles and was named to the conference all-academic team on three occasions. A school record-holder indoors and outdoors, he served as chair of Florida's Student-Athlete Action Committee, a group that serves as a forum where student-athletes communicate with administrative officials. Holloway is interested in a career in ear, nose and throat surgery.

James R. Loveless (track and field/cross country, Kent State University, 3.710 GPA in marketing and finance)—Loveless was an all-American in cross country and was named the Mid-American Athletic Conference track and field athlete of the year in 1991. The school record-holder in the 5,000-meter run indoors and outdoors, the 3,000 meters indoors and 10,000 meters outdoors, he was a first-team conference all-academic selection on three occasions. A member of Beta Gamma Sigma, he was the recipient of the 1992 Merle E. Wagoner, Phi Epsilon Kappa Honor and Superior Scholarship Awards. Loveless will pursue a master's degree in finance.

Christopher J. Nelson (cross country/track and field, U.S. Air Force Academy, 3.880 GPA in mathematical sciences)—Nelson was a two-time all-American in cross country. He won two Western Athletic Conference cross country titles and was named conference runner of the year in 1991 and 1992. A four-time all-conference honoree in cross country and track and field, he served as team captain of the Falcons' 1991 cross country squad, which won its first conference title. A seven-time member of the dean's list, he was named to the WAC all-academic team five times. Nelson intends to pursue a graduate degree in mathematics.

Matthew T. Chesbro (wrestling, Oklahoma State University, 3.860 GPA in accounting)—Chesbro was runner-up in the 167-pound weight class at the 1992 Division I championships. A three-time all-American and two-time Big Eight Conference champion, he posted a career match record of 99-29. A four-time conference all-academic honoree, he was named to the president's honor roll six times and the dean's honor roll one time. A member of Beta Gamma Sigma, he was a Special Olympics, American Cancer Society and Best of America Say No Program volunteer. Chesbro is interested in studying law.

Men's Divisions II and III

Howard A. Forman (baseball, Trenton State College (III), 3.784 GPA in political science)—Forman was a 1991 all-American and two-time academic all-district selection. The single-season school record-holder for pitching victories in a season (nine), he won 25 of 28 career decisions, while compiling a 3.65 earned-run average. He posted a 5-0 mark in NCAA tournament play in 1990-91 and was named second-team all-New Jersey Athletic Conference in 1990. He was a four-time Trenton State scholar-athlete and was named outstanding scholar-athlete at the school for 1991-92. Forman will study law at Seton Hall University.

Todd C. Marshall (baseball, Franklin and Marshall College (III), 3.840 GPA in government)—A four-year letter-winner, Marshall compiled a 16-8 record with six saves as one of Franklin and Marshall's top pitchers. A two-time member of the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference all-academic team, he finished ninth in the nation in strikeouts in 1990 and threw a no-hitter against Moravian College in 1991. He was named to the school's honors list four times and the dean's list on two occasions. Marshall plans to seek a master's degree in political philosophy.

Stephan J. Feldgoise (soccer, Massachusetts Institute of Technology (III), 4.700 GPA (5.000 scale) in mechanical engineering)—Feldgoise was a four-year member of the MIT soccer team and two-year participant in lacrosse. A first-team Constitution Athletic Conference selection in 1991 and a second-team selection in 1990, he was voted the soccer team's most valuable player in 1991. He registered 76 points (30 goals and 16 assists) during his career, including a career-high 10 goals and 26 points in 1991. He was a member of several honor societies, including Pi Tau Sigma and Tau Beta Pi. Feldgoise will study electrical engineering at MIT.

G. Richard Geier III (soccer, Luther College (III), 3.980 GPA in chemistry and biology)—Geier started every soccer match from the program's inception three years ago, guiding the squad to a 28-17-3 record. The school's all-time leading scorer, he served as captain three years and was named team most valuable player in each of those years. A 1992 first-team academic all-district at-large selection, he was named to the dean's list seven times. He was the recipient of the 1988 Luther Presidential Scholarship and the 1991 Adrian Docken Endowed Fellowship in Chemistry. Geier will study bioorganic chemistry at the University of Washington.

Kevin S. Mills (soccer/basketball, Kenyon College (III), 3.310 GPA in economics and psychology)—A two-sport standout, Mills is the only soccer player in school history to be named first-team all-American twice. He ranks as one of Kenyon's career leaders in goals (fourth), assists (third) and points (third). A two-year captain, he was a three-time first-team all-North Coast Athletic Conference selection in soccer and guided Kenyon to the 1990 conference crown. He was named to the academic dean's roll in 1991. Mills will study international business at the University of Chicago.

Marcus L. Conklin (swimming/water polo, University of Redlands (III), 3.598 GPA in political science and economics)—The two-sport standout was a three-time first-team all-Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference water polo selection at goalkeeper and holds seven school records, including career saves and steals. He was named the team's most valuable player three times and was rookie of the year in 1988. In swimming, he was a four-time all-conference honoree, winning the honor three times in 1992. Conklin plans to pursue a master's degree in economics.

Eric C. McIlquham (swimming, Oakland University (II), 3.160 GPA in psychology)—The 1992 Division II 100-yard butterfly champion, McIlquham won two individual titles and participated on 13 winning relay teams in his four-year career. A two-time conference all-academic selection, he earned all-American status in 26 events. The conference record-holder in three events and school record-holder in the 100 butterfly, he helped Oakland to four top-three finishes at the national championships, including three runner-up showings. He was named academic all-American in 1992. McIlquham plans to pursue a master's degree in sports psychology or sports counseling.

David E. O'Gorman (tennis, University of Missouri, St. Louis (II), 4.000 GPA in physics)—O'Gorman was a four-year recipient of the school's Scholar-Athlete Award. He was named the team's most valuable player in 1990 and served as team captain in 1991. He posted a 50-26 career mark, primarily at No. 2 singles and doubles, and advanced to the semifinals of Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association singles competition three times. In 1992, he was one of two recipients of the Undergraduate Alumni Scholarship, given to outstanding juniors or seniors in physics. O'Gorman is interested in pursuing a degree in physics.

Ted Robert Hamlin (track and field/cross country, Seattle Pacific University (II), 3.540 GPA in electrical engineering)—Runner-up in the 800-meter run at the 1991 Division II track championships, Hamlin was an academic all-region selection in 1991. The school record-holder in the 800 meters, he was named his team's most valuable performer in 1990 and served as team captain from 1990 through 1992. Winner of quarterly academic honors on 10 occasions, he was a volunteer tutor with the Seattle Street School and the Habitat for Humanity Work Camp in Guatemala. Hamlin hopes to pursue a master's degree in industrial administration.

Bret T. Kimple (track and field/cross country, University of California, Davis (II), 3.631 GPA in environmental policy analysis and planning, and economics)—Kimple earned all-American status in cross country and track and field in 1991, finishing in 24th place in cross country and as runner-up in the 3,000-meter steeplechase. He guided UC Davis to the 1991 Northern California Athletic Conference cross country title and a fourth-place finish at the national championships. The NCAC men's athlete of the year in 1991, he was an academic all-American in 1991 and the recipient of the W. P. Lindley Award, given to the outstanding student at UC Davis in scholarship, athletics and extracurricular merit. Kimple intends to obtain a master's degree in environmental policy analysis and planning.

Matthew E. Leighninger (track and field/cross country, Haverford College (III), 3.560 GPA in history and political science)—A six-time all-American, Leighninger won the 1991 indoor championship in the 1,500 meters and outdoor championship in the 3,000-meter steeplechase. Captain of the 1991 cross country team and 1992 track and field squad, he guided Haverford to four Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic Conference championships. A Rhodes Scholar nominee, he was a 14-time conference champion and set four school records. He was a member of the conference honor roll from 1989 through 1992. Leighninger will study public policy and law at Columbia University.

John M. Robinson (track and field/cross country, Johns Hopkins University (III), 3.540 GPA in biophysics)—Robinson earned all-American accolades in track and field and cross country in 1991. A three-time first-team all-University Athletic Association selection, he was voted Johns Hopkins' most valuable performer in cross country four times and was named to the UAA's all-freshman team in 1988. A member of the dean's list five times, he was a volunteer at Johns Hopkins Hospital and conducted virology research for the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine. Robinson plans to pursue a degree in systems physiology.

Men's at large

Timothy A. Ryan (gymnastics, Stanford University (I), 3.620 GPA in computer science engineering)—Ryan was a member of Stanford's 1992 national championship squad. He finished third individually in all-around competition. The all-around champion at the 1989 U.S. championships, he was selected as U.S. male athlete of the year. A four-year letter-winner, he was a recipient of the Honor/Scholar-Athlete Award four times. Ryan intends to pursue a master's degree in computer architecture and computer systems at Stanford.

William G. Berry (lacrosse, Virginia Military Institute (I), 3.592 GPA in electrical engineering)—Berry was a three-year starter on defense and was voted Virginia Military's best defensive player in 1991. Virginia Military's career leader in scoring by a defensive player, he was involved in several organizations, including the Virginia Military chapter of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers (of which he was president in 1991-92) and Tau Beta Pi Engineering Honor Society (over which he presided as vice-president and secretary). After completing a three-year commission with the U.S. Navy, Berry intends to pursue a master's degree in business administration.

Marc A. Brown (swimming, California State University, Bakersfield (II), 3.480 GPA in psychology)—Brown earned all American accolades in the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes in each of his four years of competition, placing in the top eight nationally each year. He competed in every scheduled swim meet during his four-year career. On the conference level, he was a finalist in the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes and 200- and 400-yard individual medleys all four years. A member of the dean's list from 1987 through 1992, he was an academic all-American in 1991. Brown will study exercise science at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

Jason G. Cahilly (track and field/cross country, Bucknell University (I), 3.964 GPA in international relations and economics)—A two-time Patriot League champion in track and field, Cahilly participated on 10 league title-winning squads (four in cross country and indoor track and field and two in outdoor track and field). He helped Bucknell to a 13th-place finish at the 1991 Division I cross country championships and earned seven all-conference honors. He was named to the Patriot League academic-achievement honor roll and was the recipient of the President's Award for Distinguished Academic Achievement. Cahilly will study law at Harvard University.

Wendell D. Edwards (track and field, Abilene Christian University (II), 3.243 GPA in mass communications/news editorial)—A 1990 second-team academic all-American, Edwards won the 55-meter dash at the 1990 Division II indoor track and field championships. Runner-up in the 55 meters (indoors) and 110-meter hurdles (outdoors) in 1991, he garnered all-America honors seven times (four indoors, three outdoors). The school record-holder in the 110 hurdles, he was named to the Lone Star Conference all-academic team three times. Edwards plans to pursue a degree in political science.

Kevin C. Irwin (track and field/cross country, Rice University (I), 4.075 GPA (5.000 scale) in computer science and mathematics)—Irwin earned all-district and all-Southwest Athletic Conference honors in cross country in 1991. A three-year letter-winner, he was the only Rice runner to qualify for the 1991 Division I championships. A member of the dean's list every semester, he was named the Hubert E. Bray Scholar-Athlete of the Year in 1992 and a National Merit Scholar in 1987. Irwin plans to study computer science.

John W. Mohr [track and field, Brigham Young University (I), 3.590 GPA in mechanical engineering]—Mohr earned all-American honors in the hammer throw in 1991. The school record-holder in that event, he placed second in the hammer throw, fifth in the shot put and seventh in the discus throw at the 1992 Western Athletic Conference championships. A conference all-academic honoree in 1990-91, he was a two-time recipient of a presidential scholarship and three-time winner of the Varian Associates Ginton Scholarship. Mohr will pursue a master's degree in mechanical engineering.

Vincent E. Monseau [wrestling, West Liberty State College (II), 3.451 GPA in general science education]—Monseau earned three all-American honors during a four-year career in which he compiled a match record of 93-28-2, including a 33-2 mark as a senior. His victory total ranks fifth all-time at the school. Team captain from 1990 to 1992, he was named the school's male scholar-athlete in 1991 and was the first recipient of the Joseph A. Bartell Scholar-Athlete Scholarship for Men. He was named to the dean's list four times. Monseau is interested in a career in orthopedic surgery or emergency medicine.

Matthew E. Morin [wrestling, Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology (III), 3.923 GPA in mathematics and applied optics]—Morin won four Indiana Collegiate Athletic Conference titles and was named the conference's most valuable performer two times. A three-time qualifier for the Division III championships, he compiled a 104-23-2 career mark, including a 29-7 record in 1991-92. He was a three-time NCAA Division III scholar all-American and was a second-team academic all-American in 1991. Morin intends to pursue a master's degree in applied optics.

Peter A. Walts [wrestling/soccer, Wesleyan University (III), 3.250 GPA in molecular biology and biochemistry]—Walts was a two-time NCAA Division III scholar all-American in wrestling. A four-year letter-winner in the sport, he was named to the all-New England team three times. He registered a match record of 53-18, including a 19-4 mark in 1989-90, when he placed second at the New England championships. Captain of the soccer team in 1991-92, he was awarded the Class of '38 Scholarship for overall accomplishment and strength of character in 1990 and 1992. Walts plans to attend medical school.

Men's alternates

Wylie H. Cohn, Yale University; Robert K. Meyer, University of Notre Dame; Steven T. Herron, University of Arizona; Robert J. Sherman, Northern Arizona University.

Committee plans regional approach

Directive stimulates new plan

In response to an NCAA Division II Championships Committee directive, the Division II Women's Basketball Committee has formulated a plan to emphasize regional representation in its 32-team championship field.

Meeting June 9-12 in Kansas City, Missouri, the basketball committee drafted regionalization plans for the next two championships.

When considering at-large teams for the 1993 championship, the committee will operate under its current process—the intent of selecting at least three teams from each of the eight regions.

Selection for the 1994 tournament will increase that intent to include at least four teams from each region.

The basketball committee's plan is in response to a call from the Division II Championships Committee for more regionalized championship brackets in all Division II team championships and selected individual-sport championships.

The championships committee asked each of the sports committees to submit selection processes for its August 1992 meeting.

The process of selecting at least four teams from each region can be altered only if conclusive data is available to suggest that a fifth team from one region should be chosen over a fourth team from another region.

Such data include head-to-head competition or results against a common opponent.

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 9-12 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the NCAA Division II Women's Basketball Committee:

■ Redefined the automatic-qualification criteria. Conferences will be ranked in each of the following categories: (1) overall won-lost record; (2) winning percentage against teams with records over .500; (3) winning percentage against teams with records under .500; (4) Division II won-lost records; (5) overall rank-average of the previous four categories; (6) previous year's ranking in all categories, and (7) number of winning and losing teams in the conference.

■ Discussed bracket expansion and development of a plan to increase the championship's traveling party from 20 to 22.

■ Discussed a proposed plan for the 1993-94 season to advance eight teams to the finals site and eliminate quarterfinal-site games. This move would create a championship similar to the Division II Men's Basketball Championship. Teams would compete in regional competition on the first weekend, and the eight winners would advance directly to the finals site two weeks later. Currently, the women's championship calls for regional competition the first weekend, followed by quarterfinal competition at four sites the next weekend. The championship is held on the third weekend. The committee is researching whether the finals should be held at an on-campus site or at a neutral site.

■ Developed a standardized method of score reporting among regional advisory committee chairs to reduce the time currently spent on weekly poll calls.

■ Recommended automatic qualification in 1993 for the following conferences: The Northeast-10, New England Collegiate, Pennsylvania State Athletic, Central Intercollegiate Athletic, Gulf South, Great Lakes Valley, Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic and Northern California Athletic Conferences and the Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletic and California Collegiate Athletic Associations. The committee's recommendations will be forwarded to the Executive Committee for approval at its August meeting.

■ Moved Le Moyne College from the East region to the New England region, placed New York Institute of Technology in the East region and placed all teams in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference in the South Central region.

State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions.

The list includes 10 bills from eight states. This report includes one bill that has been introduced and nine pending bills on which action has been taken since the last report (May 27, 1992). The newly introduced bill is marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of June 18, 1992. The listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information about a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

Anabolic steroids .....5

Gambling .....1
Liability .....1
Scalping .....1
State universities .....1
Trainers .....1

Three bills relating to anabolic steroids have become law since the last report.

The legislatures in five states—Alaska, Connecticut, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Wisconsin—have adjourned since the last report, bringing to 31 the number of state legislatures that have adjourned. Bills in the five states will not carry over to 1993, and pending bills died at the conclusion of the session if they had not been cleared for the governor's signature.

Stanford, Arkansas, Trenton State excel in team championship competition

ence," Beckett said. "I think we root for one another. Then, as you look at regional success, we all look to support that as well."

Highlighting Stanford's year was its second women's basketball championship in the last three years, a sweep in men's and women's swimming, and crowns in men's gymnastics and tennis.

But the Cardinal did not stop there. The men's volleyball and women's indoor track teams placed second, women's tennis tied for third, and women's golf and outdoor track finished fourth. Of the 30 teams that Stanford sponsors in intercollegiate competition, 23 were rated in their respective top-20 rankings—19 in the top 10—at some point during the year.

While Stanford made headlines with those five titles, two other schools each claimed three. The University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, won men's Division I cross country and track and field, while Trenton State College won women's championships in Division III field hockey, lacrosse and softball.

The Razorbacks, one of only two schools in NCAA history to win the cross country, indoor track and outdoor track championships in the same year (the University of Texas at El Paso did it four times in the late 1970s and early 1980s), repeated a feat they first achieved in 1984-85. The cross country title was the second in a row and fifth since 1984.

In March, coach John McDonnell's team won its ninth straight indoor track title, tying the record for most consecutive championships in Division I. Then, earlier this month, the Hogs beat defending champion Tennessee by 13½ points to claim their second outdoor track championship.

In November, Sharon Goldbrenner's field hockey squad at Trenton State won its second straight championship and fifth overall (four under Goldbrenner). Then, in May, Goldbrenner's lacrosse team did the same thing. The softball team's title was the fourth for Trenton State.

The Cardinal, Razorbacks and Lions were not the only teams to have outstanding years in 1991-92. Nine other schools won two championships. Twelve won championships for the first time. Eight more won titles for the first time in a particular sport.

What follows is a tapestry of the 1991-92 championships, weaving individual and team exploits.

Golden State dominance

As it has during the past few years, California won the most team championships of the 50 states. But 1991-92 was particularly good to the Golden State. Led by Stanford's five, 18 team titles were won by teams from California. Other winners were Pepperdine University and UCLA with two each, and one each for California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo; San Jose State University; the University of California, San Diego; California State University, Dominguez Hills; California State University, Bakersfield; the University of California, Davis; California State Polytechnic University, Pomona; Pomona-Pitzer Colleges, and the University of California, Berkeley. (See the list accompanying this story for the championships won by each school.)

But the strength was not limited to the West Coast. In the East, New York was the second most successful state, claiming seven crowns, including Ithaca College's two titles. Michigan, New Jersey (led by Trenton State's three), North Carolina (including St. Augustine's College's two) and Virginia (with Christopher Newport College's two) each won five titles.

Actually, Stanford (and California) could have added to those impressive numbers had not the Cardinal seen its six-year reign atop Division I women's tennis ended by the University of Florida.

Of California's champions, only two—Cal State Dominguez Hills in Division II women's soccer and Pomona-Pitzer in Division III women's tennis—experienced victory for the first time.

A new king and queen

Hobart College won the first Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship in 1980. It hadn't lost a championship game since, claiming an NCAA-record 12 in a row. Even a coaching change in 1990 didn't derail this runaway train. The 1992 season didn't look to be any different. The Statesmen were playing the semifinals on their home field, where they had won nine of the previous 12 championships.

In the semifinals, the Statesmen were matched against Nazareth College (New York), a team they had beaten earlier in the season. In that game, Hobart erased a big deficit and won, 13-12.

In the semifinal game, Nazareth (New York) led, 8-1, in the first half, but the lead was only 9-6 after three quarters. Then, Nazareth (New York) led, 12-10, with 34 seconds left only to see Hobart's Bobby Wynne bring the Statesmen within one goal. Wynne scored again with just three seconds left in regulation to send the game to overtime.

The extra period did not last long. When Marty Kelly slipped his fifth goal of the game past Hobart goalie Kevin Banks on the opening play of the overtime period, the Golden Flyers ended a streak that was begun when they were grade-schoolers.

Meanwhile Florida became the first school outside California to win the Division I women's tennis title (Stanford had won eight and the University of Southern California two). But it wasn't the Gators who stopped Stanford. The University of Texas at Austin did the honors in semifinal play on the Cardinal's home court.

The title was vindication for Florida, which entered the championships ranked No. 1 and undefeated for the second year in a row. Last year, UCLA ended Florida's dreams of claiming the title. There was no such fall this year.

Lucky 13, and other streaks

Some say it's not a team sport because the competitors are competing for individual honors. But call it what you will, Kenyon College continues to roll. The Kenyon men won their 13th straight Division III swimming championship and the Kenyon women won their ninth straight. That makes 22 championships in 13 years for Kenyon coach Jim Steen. Still, the coach maintains perspective.

"All we presume to do in any given year is contend," Steen said. "Our opponents may feel that we're more than contenders. That's fine. But what is important is how we view it."

At the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, the Tar Heels won their sixth straight championship and ninth in the 10-year history of Division I women's soccer competition. They swept through three games in the playoffs, including a 3-1 victory over the University of Wisconsin, Madison, in the championship game, without their top two players and their head coach, who at the time were part of the United States' winning team in the first Women's World Cup in China.

Championships

Hobart streak ends, but others maintain string of titles

The Louisiana State University women's track team also picked up its sixth straight crown in the Division I Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships. The Tigers held off indoor champion Florida by six points, reversing the order of finish of the Southeastern Conference championships two weeks earlier.

Cal State Bakersfield won its seventh straight Division II men's swimming crown. It marked the 19th time in 20 years that a team from California won the championship. It also was the 20th straight year that either Ernie Maglischo of Cal State Bakersfield or Pete Accardy of California State University, Northridge (now in Division I), coached the winning team.

Maglischo coached California State University, Chico, to three titles in four years from 1973 to 1976. He then interrupted the California string by leading Oakland University in Michigan to the title in 1980.

Methodist College is the new king of the hill in Division III men's golf. A 13-stroke victory over perennial runner-up Gustavus Adolphus College gave coach Steve Conley's team its third straight team golf championship.

West Virginia University won its fifth consecutive rifle title and eighth in 10 years. Also, Ann Marie Pfiffner of West Virginia won her second straight individual air-rifle title, although it should be noted that individual and team competitions are separate. The team title was the third in a row for coach Marsha Beasley.

There are two other "runs" of note. The University of Iowa's wrestling team won its 13th Division I title in the last 18 years. That still leaves the Hawkeyes 16 championships behind Oklahoma State, which holds the record for most championships in one sport with 29. UCLA also won its seventh title in the 11-year history of the Division I Women's Softball Championship.

One to build on

Twelve teams experienced the thrill of winning a national championship for the first time, including two from the same conference—in the same sport. Calvin College and Alma College of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association swept men's and women's basketball titles, respectively, in Division III.

Calvin, which previously had won only three individual championships (all in outdoor track and field), laid claim to the No. 1 ranking early in the season and then swept through the playoffs. The Knights crushed Jersey City State University, 81-40, in the semifinals before outlasting the University of Rochester, 62-49, in the final.

Alma, which never had claimed a team or individual title, edged Luther College, 81-80, to advance to the championship game, in which the Scots defeated Moravian College, 79-75.

Alabama A&M University became a first-time winner by sprinting to a 25-point victory in the Division II Women's Indoor Track Championships. Behind Taiwo Alade's meet record in the 55-meter hurdles, Tameka Hutchins' meet record in the long jump, Gloria Morgan's 800-meter title and the exploits of the Akinremi sisters (Omotayo, Omolade and Taiye), the Lady Bulldogs won four events and placed second in three for 64 of their 67 points.

They didn't have to wait long for the second team championship in school history. The Lady Bulldogs scored 98 points on the final day of competition to lap the rest of the field in the outdoor championships.

Football also saw two first-time champions. Youngstown State University won the Division I-AA championship and Pittsburgh State University won the Division II title. Other first-time winners, along with Nazareth (New York) in men's lacrosse, were William Paterson College (Division III baseball), Cal State Dominguez Hills (Division II women's soccer), Missouri Southern State College (Division II softball), Pomona-Pitzer (Division III women's tennis) and the University of Central Oklahoma (Division II wrestling).

The eight schools that won for the first time in a particular sport were Pepperdine (Division I baseball); the University of Tampa (Division II baseball); the University of Massachusetts, Lowell (Division II men's cross country); Rochester (Division III cross country); the University of Arizona (Division I men's golf); Stanford (men's gymnastics); Princeton University (Division I men's lacrosse), and Florida (Division I women's tennis and indoor track and field).

Multiple threats

A triple crown (plus one) was won by Christie Allen of Pittsburg State. She won the Division II individual title in women's cross country, the indoor 1,500-meter run and the outdoor 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs.

Phil Mickelson completed his triple in early June by rewriting the record books in Division I men's golf. He claimed his third individual championship by setting tournament records for two- (16 under) and three-round (19 under) scores and matching records for one (nine under) and four (17 under) rounds. His three championships matched Ben Crenshaw of Texas, who won three (tying teammate Tom Kite for one) in the early 1970s.

San Jose State University's women's golf team won the Division I championship for the third time in 10 years.

Other individual standouts from 1991-92 include Kim Oden of Nebraska Wesleyan University, who won her third indoor track title and sixth and seventh outdoor titles in record fashion; Summer Sanders, who set two American and three meet individual records and swam on two American-record-breaking relays to help lead Stanford to the Division I women's swimming championship, and honors student Jon Lindquist of Gustavus Adolphus, who finished his golf career as a four-time all-American and the 1992 Division III champion. Also, Martin Lonardi, who led Columbus to the Division II golf championship by shooting a course- and tournament-record 64 on the final round; Pat Smith of Oklahoma State, who won his third straight wrestling championship at 158 pounds (if he wins next year, he will become the first four-time champion in Division I wrestling history); Missy Marlowe of the University of Utah, who became the first woman gymnast to win four individual titles (floor, uneven bars, balance beam and all-around) in one year, and Alex O'Brien of Stanford, who became the first tennis player to win three individual titles in 18 years.

"The 1991-92 championship season has been a remarkable one—each new season seems to bring new highs," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said. "It's great to see the outstanding abilities of our men and women athletes in action."

And it's not unreasonable to believe that next year will be even better.

Top schools produce winners

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

When one thinks of major collegiate powers—the ones that win national championships—top academic institutions might not necessarily come to mind.

But two professors at the University of Illinois, Champaign, have found a convincing correlation between academic and athletics excellence. Duke University's Division I Men's Basketball Championship, its second in a row, and Stanford University's five national championships during the 1991-92 academic year have added substance to the researchers' findings.

Lawrence DeBrock, associate professor of economics, and Wallace Hendricks, professor of economics and labor and industrial relations, gathered information on all the sports in which the NCAA sponsored Division I championships between 1982 and 1991. They also included data generated from Division I football.

Mix of academics, athletics

The pair had a central question in mind when they embarked upon the project: Can institutions with lofty academic standards compete successfully, or are they burdened by their own enrollment requirements and the difficulty of their classes?

The study was conducted this way: For sports in which teams qualify for NCAA championships, institutions were given credit for each season they qualified a team in a national championship. For sports in which individuals qualify and team scores are computed (such as swimming and track and field), the researchers counted an institution as reaching the championship if the team scored in the top 12 percent of the field.

They arrived at that figure because it approximates the percentage of institutions participating in a particular sport that the NCAA uses in determining the number of team slots to allow for in that sport's championship.

For example, during the 1990-91 academic year, the researchers noted, 158 institutions competed in men's swimming at the Division I level. To get credit for "qualifying" in a championship in that sport, an institution would have had to finish in the top 20 (12 percent of 158).

Academic quality

The academic quality of the institutions was determined by a 1990 report compiled by U.S. News and World Report. The report ranked the top 204 "national universities" by breaking them into quartiles of 51 schools each.

Over the 10-year period studied, the professors found that the University of California, Los Angeles, ranked No. 1 in the nation with championship qualifications with both its men's and women's programs placing first. Academically, UCLA was ranked No. 17 in the country.

In second place with championship qualifications was the University of Texas at Austin, with its men's sports ranked third in the nation and its women's second. Texas was listed between 26th and 51st in academic quality in the magazine's report (the second, third and fourth quartiles were listed alphabetically).

Others with impressive academic and athletics marks (with overall athletics ranking and academic ranking in parentheses): University of Southern California (third, 26th-51st); Stanford (fourth, second); University of Florida (sixth, 26th-51st); and Pennsylvania State University (seventh, 26th-51st).

Much of the criticism of collegiate athletics, the authors wrote in their report, has been directed at men's basketball and football. "After all," the authors note, "women and men in nonrevenue sports are likely to place more value on their degrees since their opportunities for professional income in their sports are limited."

To address this issue, the authors compiled comparisons of athletics success in both men's basketball and football and found similar results—that championship-caliber athletics teams were likely to come from institutions with impressive academic standings.

State at an institution that does not have the geographic advantages of many other institutions. Then he moved to the WAC and developed that conference into a power. He has left a positive mark everywhere he has gone."

As might be expected, Bates takes all the flattery in stride.

"That's quite an honor," he said when the comments of his peers were read to him.

"I was in athletics for 46 years and enjoyed every minute of it. It's nice to be recognized as someone who did a good, honest job in the work he was doing."

Though Bates has been retired for 12 years, his name still is prominent in athletics. He spends two months a year in San Diego helping Reid put the finishing touches on the Holiday Bowl. "John and I have known each other for a long time," he said. "They just turn the NCAA stuff over to me."

Reid said Bates' assistance is invaluable. "You realize after it's all done that it wouldn't have been done without his effort. He has a very calming influence on us. The week before the game is very hectic, and he comes in and calms me down, as well as my staff. He keeps us smiling."

Proud of award

One honor that keeps Bates smiling is the Stan Bates Award. Each year, the WAC schools each submit a name of one student-athlete who best exemplifies great athletics achievement and scholarship. Then, the conference selects one from that group to receive the award. Bates and his wife, Mildred, are brought to the winner's campus to present the award each year.

"I'm real proud that they do that," he said. "A professor at Washington State recently told me that he met a former winner from the University of Hawaii. The athlete said of all the awards he has received, the one that means the most to him is the Stan Bates Award."

Bates is active in civic organizations in Pullman, Washington. He also speaks to groups—interestingly, about the NCAA. "They still think I know something about the rules of intercollegiate athletics," he said. "If there is a story coming out about a change, they figure they can ask me and I can give them an answer, which I can't do in many cases."

Two children and four grandchildren, including two teenage grandsons in the Pullman area, also keep him busy. And he shows no signs of slowing down.

"I feel fine," he said. "I just had a birthday

(he's 82). I walk anywhere from four to six miles a day. That gives me something to do. I just had my physical, and the doctor said everything is great. My blood pressure is low. Maybe that's because I didn't blow up too much or get too excited."

For those people with whom Bates has come in contact in his years in athletics, he "remains a figure of integrity and achievement," as Hansen put it.

"For me, being a younger administrator, he epitomized ethics in intercollegiate athletics," Kearney said. "He was a great competitive athlete. He is a consummate gentleman. His name symbolizes all that is good about college athletics."

Leo Durocher wouldn't have understood.

Gender-Equity Task Force to proceed cautiously

The first meeting of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force is not until July 9, but Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said it already appears unlikely that any special legislation on the subject will be considered at the January 1993 Convention.

"I would be surprised if you would see special legislation," Schultz said at the June 16 NCAA Media Seminar in Washington, D.C. "It needs to be the right thing....It's not something you're going to solve in six months."

Phyllis L. Howlett, assistant commissioner of the Big Ten Conference and cochair of the task force, agreed that the task force would proceed with caution. "I don't think the Association has ever dealt with a more emotional issue than this one," she said.

Schultz said that although legislation doesn't appear likely, a report to the Convention is a possibility. Schultz said the presentation could be similar to one made by the special certification committee at the 1992 Convention.

Other points

Other points made on the subject of gender equity:

■ Howlett reemphasized her awareness of football's role in college athletics and stressed her desire for the committee to be aware of conditions that might justify different treatment of male and female athletes. Discussing the gender-equity survey that was released in March (the survey indicated funding disparities between men's and women's programs), she said: "It's important that you look at the data as the 'whats' and not the 'whys.' It may be that it's legitimate to spend more money on a 300-pound wrestler than on a 90-pound gymnast."

She said some traditional approaches might need to be modified, and she suggested finding ways to lower football recruiting expenses as an example.

"One of my greatest fears is to see this become a war of genders," she said. "I don't want to see that occur...but this is not an exercise for the faint of heart."

■ Howlett said she believed the NCAA would consider need-based aid at some point, and Schultz confirmed that "I've heard a lot of discussion in the last six months about this." He said it is a difficult issue, however, since financial aid officers have considerable flexibility regarding need-based aid and that "a lot of paranoia" exists within the membership on how that flexibility could be controlled among the member institutions.

■ Schultz cited grant-in-aid limits as an NCAA rule that might preclude member institutions from complying with Title IX.

The task force has asked the membership to identify instances in which NCAA legislation may conflict with Title IX requirements. Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research and a staff liaison to the task force, said response has been light so far.

Howlett said "it's not too far a reach" to think that the proposed certification program might be used as a tool to help campuses conform with Federal law.

■ Schultz noted that he has observed significantly different walk-on rates between male and female athletics teams, even in cases where scholarship allotments are the same, such as soccer. "(NCAA members) fund both men's and women's soccer," he said, "but if I go to men's practice, there are 40 athletes out there. If I go to women's practice, there are 20."

He said that restricting male walk-ons might be a way to bring participation ratios more in line, "but would that be reverse discrimination?"

■ On the matter of grant limits, Schultz said he thought the 85-grant maximum "is a good test" for Division I-A. "My own feeling is we can go to 85 and the equity (of competition) will be better than ever," he said. Legislation passed at the 1991 Convention will restrict I-A members to a total of 85 football scholarships by 1994-95.

Open hearings face an uncertain future

Lee says perception of NCAA would benefit; Williams cites potential harm

Several of the recommendations of the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process have been adopted, but its idea of open fact-finding hearings faces an uncertain future.

D. Alan Williams, faculty athletics representative at the University of Virginia and chair of the NCAA Committee on Infractions, said open hearings would "wreak havoc" and that the candor of those who might otherwise offer corroborative information would be diminished.

His comments were made at the NCAA Media Seminar June 16 in Washington, D.C.

Two recommendations of the special committee—open hearings and independent hearing officers—would require approval at an NCAA Convention before being enacted.

Rex E. Lee, president of Brigham Young University and chair of the special committee, said that recommending open hearings and hearing officers was a close call even within the committee and that he understood the concerns of those who are opposed to their implementation.

Lee noted that the infractions committee currently does a good job in conducting fair hearings but that "this is an area where perception falls over into reality." Considering the public confidence that would be gained from open hearings, he said. "Our committee felt this was a small price to pay."

S. David Berst, assistant executive director for enforcement, said he was concerned that open hearings would "skew the balance in favor of those who would want to violate NCAA rules." He also said that witnesses frequently are reluctant to appear even at a closed meeting and that getting them to cooperate in an open environment might be impossible.

Ultimately, both Lee and Williams deferred to the will of the Convention. "I won't feel like our work was for naught," Lee said about the possibility of the recommendations not being approved. "The committee will live with whatever the membership decides," Williams said.

Other issues

On other enforcement-process issues:

■ Lee said the most important component of the special committee's recommendations was the summary disposition procedure, which the NCAA Council approved in concept in January. Summary disposition allows that when the institution and the NCAA agree on the facts in a major infractions case, they can mutually determine a resolution to recommend to the Committee on Infractions.

■ Williams said the infractions committee has noted a major change in the way NCAA members are policing themselves and that the involvement of presidents has resulted in cases that are more fully developed by the time they reach the committee. Institutions are acting aggressively to deal with staff members who knowingly violate the rules, he said.

"It's not a matter of them saying, 'We got rid of Coach X and Coach Y because we thought (the NCAA) would let us off,'" he said. Instead, Basketball coaches have expressed concern over their role in the reform movement. I have asked the Presidents Commission to bring this issue to their attention for action. Other appropriate sports committees may also be asked to report to the Presidents Commission on the status of this problem and proposed remedies.

Universities are, among other things, guardians of the language, the instrument of thought and meaning. The integrity of our language matters. Foul language degrades the speaker and the hearer. Coaches may reveal their lack of respect for themselves and others by the language they use in private. Their public verbal conduct is our concern.

Drake working to assure promise of education

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Drake University just got more serious about holding up its promise of a first-class education to its student-athletes.

The institution's faculty senate recently adopted a proposal that requires the registrar to prepare academic-progress reports on student-athletes each semester. That information will be forwarded to a faculty committee on academic accountability, which will pass the reports to the provost, who will make the records open to the faculty upon request.

The report will include the courses student-athletes have completed and courses being taken, course title, instructor's name, credit hours, grades received, grade-point average, academic standing and academic major. It also will include the sport in which the student-athlete participates, the name of the student-athlete's faculty adviser and dean of the college in which the student-athlete is enrolled.

The provost will appoint the committee annually. It will consist of five members from among the recipients of the university's outstanding-undergraduate-teacher-of-the-year awards. The faculty senate will appoint another faculty member to the committee, and the faculty athletics representative will sit on the committee.

Faculty involvement

The committee will review the registrar's report and make appropriate recommendations to the president, provost, deans and faculty senate. The report made available to the provost and, subsequently, other members of the faculty, will not disclose the name, sport, semester grades, overall GPA or academic standing of individual student-athletes.

School officials said the process was established to provide more than just talk on the issue of faculty involvement in institutional control.

"It's just an extra measure to involve the faculty," Drake President Michael R. Ferrari said. "It's been a topic that's been discussed on our campus for a year. This is one of the ways the faculty did it. We want to be sure that (student-athletes) are getting what we promised they would get when we recruited them—a first-class education."

Athletics director Lynn King said his department is not resisting the extra faculty involvement in athletics affairs.

King, however, did express some concern about a recommendation, which was not approved by the faculty senate, that would have allowed the institution to publish such information as a student-athlete's course and teacher schedule in media and game programs.

"We certainly welcome any review within our athletics department," King said. "We welcome greater faculty involvement. My only concern is that we don't violate student-athletes' rights. We're very proud of our academics here. We have a high percentage of our kids doing well in a tough academic environment."

Tired of the charges

The faculty senate considered a series of resolutions proposed by Jon Ericson, former provost at Drake and current Ellis and Nelle Levitt Professor in Speech Communication.

It was Ericson's essay, "While Faculty Sleep," that initially requested that the faculty senate consider four motions to increase faculty responsibility and involvement in educating student-athletes. The resolution that passed at the senate's May meeting was a combination of various elements from each motion.

"I am just tired of all the charges," Ericson said of the state of intercollegiate athletics. "I am a member of a faculty, and I take that charge very seriously. There has to be an awareness that we (faculty) are a part of the national problem."

Robert Hariman, president of the faculty senate, agreed that faculty members must assume more responsibility in assuring that student-athletes walk away from campuses with meaningful educations when their eligibility has elapsed. He said Drake's faculty is attempting to reach that end with the adoption of the academic-progress reports.

"I think we rely far too much on aggregate data," said Hariman, an associate professor in the speech communication department. "By looking at the records, you'll see what is happening. You'll see if an athlete is taking nothing but introductory classes, for example. It's not our job to produce winning teams. It's our job to produce well-educated students."

137 more leagues approved

An additional 137 summer basketball leagues have been approved for student-athlete participation, bringing to 372 the number certified by the NCAA Council.

Other lists of approved summer leagues appeared in the April 22 and 29, May 6, 20 and 27, and June 3 and 10 issues of The NCAA News.

Questions concerning the application process or the requirements for NCAA approval of summer leagues should be directed to Christopher D. Schoemann, legislative assistant, at the NCAA national office.

■ Sports law

Student-athletes are responsible for a variety of sources of taxable income, according to For the Record, the publication of the National Sports Law Institute.

Internal Revenue Service representatives said student-athletes often are not aware that they are responsible for taxes in the following areas:

■ The value of travel for official visits in the recruiting process (including air transportation, lodging, meals and entertainment).

■ Expenses paid for travel to receive an award.

■ The portion of an athletics scholarship including room and board. The part of a grant covering tuition, books and fees is not taxable.

The article said that the tax obligation of student-athletes generally would be low. Using a worst-case scenario of an athlete who took the maximum of five recruiting visits, received a full scholarship with room and board amounting to $3,000, and worked a summer job while having little income held back for taxes, the obligation still was only about $300. In most cases, it would be less; in others, a refund would be possible.

Army-Navy site changes in '93

The 1993 football game between the U.S. Military Academy and the U.S. Naval Academy will be played at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, New Jersey, instead of at the traditional site in Philadelphia.

The announcement was made June 7 by New Jersey Gov. Jim Florio and Robert Mulcahy, president of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority.

The 1993 game, which will be played December 4, will be the second Army-Navy contest at Giants Stadium. In 1989, Navy beat Army, 19-17, in East Rutherford.

Army and Navy have met in Philadelphia for all but two years since 1945. The other non-Philadelphia game was played in 1983 at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, California.

Dan Devine returns to Missouri as AD

Dan Devine, director of community education-substance abuse at Arizona State, will return as athletics director at Missouri, where he served as AD from 1967 to 1970.

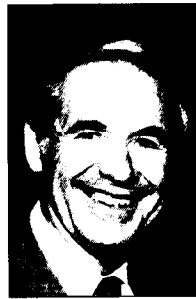

He also was head football coach at the school from 1958 to 1970 before heading the Green Bay Packers from 1971 to 1974 and Notre Dame from 1975 to 1980.

Devine, 67, was one of Missouri's most successful coaches, leading the Tigers to bowl victories in 1960, 1962, 1965 and 1968. He signed a one-year contract and said that one of his major concerns is changing the athletics department's image.

"I'm going to concentrate on making some real progress in external and internal morale," Devine told The Associated Press, "not only in the athletics department, but in fans, supporters and gift-givers."

Gerald Brouder, interim chancellor at Missouri, said Devine's one-year contract will not undercut his authority or effectiveness.

"I don't want to perceive that what we've done here is hire a football coach for a term," Brouder said. "We've hired an athletics director. We have a football coach who will run the football program."

Arizona administrator named AD at Dayton

Ted Kissell, associate director of athletics for sports programs and external operations at Arizona, will become Dayton's seventh director of athletics.

The 46-year-old Chicago native, who has served 12 years at Arizona, has overseen the football, men's basketball, baseball and men's golf programs at that school for the past four years. Kissell helped design and execute a strategic compliance plan for Arizona, and developed a marketing program that included selling $3.5 million worth of skyboxes and premium seats in a $7 million expansion of Arizona Stadium in 1989.

"There's a rich tradition at Dayton that's really exciting to be part of and be able to influence the future," Kissell said. "It's been a goal of mine for some time to be an athletics director at a major Division I institution. Dayton was particularly appealing to me because of how diverse the opportunities are. The job is not only intercollegiate athletics, but it's also arena management and the opportunity to work with most of the student body through recreational and intramural sports."

Dayton's president, Brother Raymond L. Fitz, called Kissell's appointment "a great fit" for the institution. "He understands the tradition we have here," Fitz said, "and he has the energy and innovation to take the University of Dayton into the future."

Cost containment explored to assist men's gymnastics

Looking for ways to make its championships financially solvent, the NCAA Men's Gymnastics Committee will ask the NCAA Executive Committee to approve several measures aimed at reducing the costs of conducting the championships.

At its annual meeting June 16-19 in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee endorsed several measures it hopes will reduce the championships' financial deficit and ensure its survival. In 1991, men's gymnastics showed a deficit of $90,037. Figures for 1992 have yet to be released.

Among the cost-reduction measures the committee proposes are reducing the championships from three days to two, reducing the championships field, allowing the use of restricted air-fare tickets and reducing the per diem allowance.

The reduction in the championships' length and field size would be the most significant reductions. The new format would include only preliminaries and team and individual finals.

The number of teams competing would be reduced from eight to six. In addition, up to six all-around competitors (not on a participating team) and six individuals (not on a team or in the all-around) could qualify for the preliminaries. The proposal would provide for a maximum of 96 competitors. The 1992 championships included 129 competitors.

Other measures the committee has proposed include limiting to three the number of finalists from one institution in any one event and reducing from 10 to six the number of teams per region qualifying for regional competition. In addition, 12 all-around competitors (not on a team) and 12 individuals (not on a team or in the all-around) could qualify.

While the proposals are a method of cutting costs, they also are means by which the committee hopes to comply with NCAA legislation.

According to Bylaws 18.2.3 and 18.2.4, a sport must be sponsored by at least seven percent of the membership to maintain its championship status. Men's gymnastics has a sponsorship of 41, well below the seven-percent requirement.

However, championships that do not meet the seven-percent requirement are exempt if net receipts exceed all expenses, including transportation and per diem expenses as specified in Executive Regulation 31.4.6.

Gymnastics Committee chair Fred Turoff discusses issues.

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 16-19 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the NCAA Men's Gymnastics Committee:

■ Discussed proposed legislation for the 1993 NCAA Convention that would allow championships not meeting the minimum sponsorship criteria to continue to be sponsored with reduced financial backing from the NCAA.

■ Decided that no alternates will be named for championships competition until the individual-event finals at the championships.

■ Met with NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz; Patricia E. Bork, NCAA group executive director for championships and event management, and Donna J. Noonan, NCAA director of championships, to address concerns regarding the status and continuation of championships.

■ Asked that all bids for 1993 regional competition be submitted to Deborah R. Nelson, NCAA assistant director of championships, at the national office by June 30.

Notables

Jim Baron, men's basketball coach at St. Francis (Pennsylvania), selected as coach of the Panama national team that will compete in the Olympic qualifying tournament in Portland, Oregon...Theresa Borowitz, who was born without a left hand but went on to letter in basketball and softball at Marietta, has received the inaugural Ohio Athletic Conference Inspiration Award for the 1991-92 academic year.

Warren S. Brown selected as executive director of USA Basketball, effective October 1, succeeding the retiring Bill Wall. A former college basketball player, Brown served most recently as assistant executive director of the National Federation of State High School Associations. He also serves as vice-chair of USA Basketball's Games Committee for Men and is vice-chair of USA Basketball's Men's National Team Subset.

Division III coach of the year. She also won the award in 1988. Genovese has compiled a career record of 134-81.

Eight college basketball players were named by USA Basketball to help the U.S. Olympic men's basketball team prepare for the Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain. The eight members of the development team are Bobby Hurley of Duke, Jamal Mashburn of Kentucky, Anfernee Hardaway of Memphis State, Grant Hill of Duke, Allan Houston of Tennessee, Eric Montross of North Carolina, Rodney Rogers of Wake Forest and Chris Webber of Michigan.

Etc.

ENDOWMENTS

The position of running backs coach is the latest to be endowed in the Endowment for Excellence program at Miami (Ohio). A gift of $200,000 has been received in the name of John Pont, head football coach at Mount St. Joseph College in Cincinnati and one of only two former Miami (Ohio) players to have jersey numbers retired. Bob Hayden of Cincinnati provided the primary gift for the endowment. The head coach's and quarterbacks coach's positions previously were endowed at Miami (Ohio).

As part of its Campaign to Excel, Dartmouth has established the Dartmouth Athletics Endowment to provide permanent financial support for athletics.

CONFERENCE MEMBERS

The Big South Conference announced that Towson State, Maryland-Baltimore County and North Carolina-Greensboro will join the league, beginning with the 1992-93 academic year. The additions boost the conference's membership to 10 institutions. Big South member Davidson will rejoin the Southern Conference, effective July 1.

SPORTS SPONSORSHIPS

Adelphi reinstated men's and women's swimming after suspending them five years ago.

Hobart announced it is eliminating its men's track and field program, effective with the 1992-93 academic year. The sport had been sponsored at the institution since 1970-71.

Wisconsin-Superior announced it will offer men's and women's cross country and eliminate women's gymnastics and wrestling, effective with the 1992-93 academic year.

CORRECTIONS

Due to an editor's error, a headline in the June 3 issue of The NCAA News incorrectly named the team champion of the 1992 National Collegiate Women's Golf Championships. As reported in the story, San Jose State won the team title.

Due to an editor's error, the name of the women's basketball coach who accepted additional responsibilities as women's volleyball coach at John Jay was reported incorrectly in the Record section of the June 3 issue of The NCAA News. Ulana Lysniak was named to the post.

Division II league formed

Seven NCAA member institutions that were members of two Division II conferences have joined to form the Pacific West Conference, which will sponsor championships in men's and women's basketball and women's volleyball beginning with the 1992-93 academic year.

The schools formerly were members of the men's Great Northwest Conference and women's Continental Divide Conference. Five of the schools held dual membership in both leagues: the University of Alaska Anchorage, University of Alaska Fairbanks, Eastern Montana College, Grand Canyon University and Seattle Pacific University.

Chaminade University, which joined the Great Northwest in 1991, will compete in men's basketball only in the Pacific West, and Portland State University, which joined the Continental Divide Conference in 1991, will compete in women's basketball only in the new league.

Woody Hahn, who had served as commissioner of both of the old leagues, will retain that post with the Pacific West. Keith Baker, associate athletics director at Grand Canyon, will serve a two-year term as league president.

University of Massachusetts Director of Athletics

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST seeks applications and nominations for Director of Athletics, with an intended appointment date around September 1, 1992, or sooner. The University of Massachusetts is an NCAA Division I institution sponsoring 22 sports. The Director of Athletics (full-time, 12-month administrator) reports to the Chancellor. The Director has total administrative responsibility for the development, management, and operation of all athletic and intramural programs. The Director provides educational and administrative management and leadership in the areas of fiscal management, promotions, marketing, public relations, advertising, sports information, fund-raising and tickets.

Qualifications: An advanced degree in an appropriate field is required. The candidate must possess experience in the successful administration of athletics programs or have comparable experience. Candidates should have a track record of success as a personnel manager and as a successful leader, possess the ability to deal with diverse constituencies, and must present evidence of personal and professional integrity. The successful candidate should exhibit a strong sensitivity to the academic mission and requirements of the university and demonstrate an understanding of the proper role of athletics within the mission of the university. The candidate must demonstrate a commitment to NCAA rules and compliance; applicable rules, regulations and laws; and support of academic and affirmative action goals. Candidates should have proven organizational, administrative, communications and interpersonal skills; and demonstrated public relations and fund-raising abilities.

Compensation: The compensation will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Application and Appointment Process: To begin the application process, applicants should submit a letter of inquiry, a current resume, and a list of three current professional references with addresses and telephone numbers. Applicant review will begin on July 15, 1992, and will close when a suitable applicant is chosen. Application materials should be sent to:

Chair, Director of Athletics Search Committee
203 Boyden Building
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003

1992 Column No. 25

Certification of foreign student-athletes Divisions I and II—initial eligibility

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that whenever foreign student records are sent to the NCAA Foreign Student Records Consultants for evaluation of whether the individual meets core-curriculum requirements, the following items must be included: (1) Copies of the student's original records; (2) certified English translations (if applicable); (3) copies of the student's application form, including the student's birth date, and (4) an educational history profile, setting forth the number of years and type of the student's education. (The aforementioned requirements can be found in the May 1992 edition of the NCAA Guide to International Academics Standards for Athletics Eligibility, page 4.) Failure to include any of these items may delay review of the student's records. Further, member institutions are responsible for establishing the validity of all documents.

Finally, for students who initiate their secondary studies in a foreign educational system and complete those studies in an American educational system, the student's complete records should be submitted to the NCAA national office for review. The consultants will evaluate the combined secondary records of such students to determine if the spirit of the Association's core-curriculum requirements have been fulfilled.

Please note that a student's records should be submitted to the national office only when a portion of the student's foreign credentials are necessary to satisfy the Association's core-curriculum requirements. It is not necessary to send the student's complete records to the national office if the student's American records alone satisfy the core-curriculum requirements.

Individual sports

Coaches' involvement with student-athletes during the summer

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 17.02.1.2.2, in individual sports, a coach may participate in individual workout sessions with student-athletes from the coach's team during the summer, provided the request for such assistance is initiated by the student-athlete. Further, if the institution's coach is the coach of an outside sports team during the summer, he or she may be involved with student-athletes with eligibility remaining from the institution's team. (See Bylaw 17 for limitations on the number of student-athletes from the same institution who may participate on the team.) A coach may not be involved in supervising or directing activities involving a student-athlete from the coach's team, unless the student-athlete and coach are involved with the same outside team and the student-athlete is representing the outside team in competition.

Permissible recruiting aids Bylaw 13.4.1-(m)

Division I member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.4.1-(m), an athletics department's stationery is limited to two colors of printing on the stationery. Such stationery may include the name, address, telephone number(s) of the athletics department's staff members and a single university logo. Photographs of student-athletes or other promotional materials are prohibited.

In addition, per Bylaw 13.4.1-(f), the restrictions governing institutional stationery also are applicable to institutional note cards. Please note that inasmuch as restrictions related to stationery (and note cards) were enacted to assist institution's with cost containment, the NCAA Council has determined that it is not permissible to produce athletics department stationery (or note cards) that do not conform to the restrictions set forth in Bylaw 13.4.1-(m), even if such stationery (or note cards) are not being provided to prospective student-athletes.

If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.*

Enforcement

Chair endorses postseason restrictions

Williams said presidents are acting within the spirit of the rules, and "I think it's the prime change that's taken place among the CEO's."

■ Williams endorsed restricting postseason play as one of the penalties available to the infractions committee. "No postseason play is the oldest penalty the Association has," he said, "and along with grant cuts, the most effective."

The recently formed Special Committee to Review the NCAA Penalty Structure is charged with examining NCAA penalties, especially as they pertain to the "innocent-student-athlete" syndrome involving athletes who are prohibited from postseason play because of violations committed by someone else.

■ NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz reiterated his belief that the NCAA's challenge of a Nevada law that seeks to establish judicial-like standards for the infractions process eventually will reach the U.S. Supreme Court. Earlier this month, a Federal district judge ruled in favor of the NCAA.

Lee, a former solicitor general of the United States, said permitting states to create individual laws for such purposes would kill intercollegiate athletics. "I don't know why the states can't see this," he said.

Certification

Perspectives vary on burden of expense

bara L. Camp, assistant director of athletics for student affairs and senior woman administrator at the University of California, Irvine, offered different perspectives on the expense of the certification process.

Camp said the expense of the pilot program—between $10,000 and $20,000—was significant, especially for an institution that is struggling financially. "That would sponsor a couple of sports at our school," she said.

Bucklew saw the matter differently. "Most of those who are going to tell you that cost is a problem are doing a little smokescreen," he said, noting that major universities normally are required to perform many certifications. "One more isn't going to break the camel's back," he said.

Camp said the UC Irvine certification process took nine months and that compilation of the final report—including the typing—was her responsibility. The typing alone took 65 hours, she said.

But Bucklew said that devoting a staff member full-time to the matter for a year is a bargain in the long run. Some athletics departments have multimillion-dollar budgets, he said, "and if it takes $30,000 or $40,000 to make sure you are doing things right, that's minor."

■ Both Camp and Bucklew said their pilot programs revealed unexpected shortcomings.

Camp said the program identified that no effective system was in place for rules compliance. "Basically, everybody was doing their own thing," she said.

Bucklew said West Virginia volunteered for the pilot program despite a general feeling that the program was solid. "We discovered we had a lot to learn about ourselves," he said.

First, he said, monitoring systems were weak relying too much on initiatives to be taken by coaches. Although the system has served the university well to this point, he said there was no assurance it would continue to do so.

Second, he cited an unevenness of NCAA rules knowledge among the staff. Coaches in revenue sports, he said, tended to be familiar with NCAA legislation—knowledge that wasn't matched by some nonrevenue coaches.

Bucklew said the pilot program prompted two changes before the self-study was completed. Increased attention was given to timely notices on financial aid, and emphasis was placed on educating coaches on rules pertaining to summer school.

"As long as the NCAA is going to have 473 pages of (rules)," he said, "you'd better make sure your people know them."

■ Leavens said some state laws will require information from the certification reports to be made public. That knowledge probably will affect the process to a degree, he said, but Bucklew dismissed the likelihood of a conspiracy to conceal information simply because it may become public.

"If it comes out that we're cheating in basketball," he said, "the dumbest thing anybody could do is say we knew about it but didn't do anything about it."

■ Leavens said the committee hopes the Convention considers the program on its merits, "not as something that's inevitable."

Insurance

Association gets new catastrophic carrier

Insurance Company of Manchester, New Hampshire.

"This is one of the most important programs that the Association provides to benefit all NCAA student-athletes," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said.

After soliciting bids in May 1991 from insurance providers interested in underwriting a multiyear program, the Association negotiated a three-year contract with North American. The provider is a member of the Swiss Re Group, the world's second-largest "reinsurance" group.

The coverage is effective August 1 this year and continues to August 1, 1995.

'Strong carrier'

"We were looking for the best coverage, service and price for the program from a strong carrier," said Michael S. McNeely, NCAA director of operations, of the bidding process. "We determined that this company best met all of the requirements."

"We believe we have improved the coverage to ultimately benefit the injured student-athlete, and at a significant savings of NCAA resources."

McNeely said the savings result primarily from the competitive bidding and the multiyear deal. Previous NCAA contracts for catastrophic-insurance coverage have been for one year only.

The new program continues to offer lifetime benefits in the event of a catastrophic injury suffered by any student-athlete, student trainer, student manager or cheerleader participating in or traveling to and from scheduled games and practices in officially sanctioned

Plan highlights

Key parts of the NCAA's new catastrophic-injury insurance program:

- Lifetime benefits for those covered by the policy.
- Loss-of-earnings benefit of up to $2,000 per month.
- College education benefit, which pays up to $60,000 for a covered student to return to school within 15 years of the injury and complete degree work.

intercollegiate sports.

In addition to continuing to offer lifetime rehabilitation, medical and dental expenses, the program features a lifetime monthly loss-of-earnings benefit, up to $2,000 a month. The payments begin 12 months after the injury.

New benefit

A new feature of the program is its "college education benefit," which provides for a covered student to return to school and complete degree work. The program will pay the cost of attendance, as defined by the NCAA, provided that the student begins studies within 15 years of the injury and completes the degree within 15 years of returning to school. The carrier will pay up to $60,000 in benefits under this provision.

"We think it's important that the injured student-athletes have the opportunity to go back to school, if they are able and desire to do so," McNeely said.

Other benefits include:

■ A special-expenses benefit for remodeling or adapting living quarters or vehicles, up to a maximum of $125,000 during the first decade and $50,000 during the second decade.

■ A maximum of $50,000 per year in home health-care benefits to cover nursing and other daily-living expenses.

■ Adjustment expenses of up to $30,000 for such things as family counseling, training and injury-related travel. Included is a loss-of-earnings benefit for the parents of the injured student, to compensate for wages lost in the adjustment period after the injury.

■ Ancillary injury and sickness benefits of up to $100,000 to help offset the injured person's inability to purchase medical insurance.

■ An accidental-death benefit of $10,000.

To enhance service, the carrier provides a 24-hour toll-free number covered by nurses who specialize in dealing with catastrophic-injury cases. The "help-line" number, effective August 1, is 800/223-6222.

The carrier encourages member institutions to provide immediate notification of injuries. "The company's philosophy is, let them know so they can involve special medical personnel and resources to assist in mitigating long-term effects of the injuries as quickly as possible," McNeely said.

Within the next couple of weeks, athletics directors will receive documents pertaining to the program: a benefit summary, which serves as proof of coverage for the institutions, and claim-procedures booklets, which directors are urged to pass on to business managers and trainers. The documents will be accompanied by a letter from Schultz announcing the 1992-93 program.
